Wings over Whiteman 2010 set to deliver exceptional performance

By Senior Airman Jason Barebo
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

The 2010 Wings Over Whiteman Air Show and Open House takes place Sept. 18 and 19 with gates open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. This free, family-oriented event is expected to draw spectators from all over the region.

"It's my pleasure to invite the public to attend Wings Over Whiteman 2010 to get an up close and personal look at the professional personnel and capabilities that help our Airmen carry out missions across the globe," said Brig. Gen. Robert Wheeler, 509th Bomb Wing commander.

"This year is going to be an outstanding show with our theme being 'Celebrating 100 years of military aviation,'" said Lt. Col. Michael Wittrock, WOW Air Show director. "We also have two great headliners in the Thunderbirds and the Golden Knights. People can expect a great variety of aircraft focusing on the history of military aviation. We carefully selected performers and aircraft to cover each major conflict U.S. airpower has been involved in, as well as ensure the Army and Navy were represented along with the Air Force."

Featured civilian performers include; the Lima Lima flight team, P-51, MiG-17 and the PT-17 aerobatic teams. Along with the aerial demonstrations and static displays, all aircraft that call Whiteman home, to include; the B-2 Spirit, T-38 Talon, A-10 Thunderbolt II and AH-64 Apache Helicopter will be available for viewing.

Replica WWI aircraft, the only flying B-29, a Vietnam War re-enactment and modern day aircraft will also be in attendance at the show.

Designated parking areas will be open to the public. Buses will make regular stops to transport spectators from the parking area to the air show. A full list of featured acts, prohibited items, security protocol and other information can be found at www.wingsoverwhiteman.com.

Whiteman to receive Navy Seabee headquarters detachment

Congressman Ike Skelton (D-Mo.) announced that the U.S. Navy is planning to locate a Seabee Headquarters unit at Whiteman Air Force Base, in a press release July 20.

Currently stationed at the former Richards-Gebauer Air Force Base in the Kansas City area, Naval Mobile Construction Battalion-15 (NMCB-15) provides rapid construction support for operational forces during regional contingencies, large or small.

NMCB-15 also supports disaster recovery and humanitarian operations, foreign or domestic, and is comprised of 17 active duty personnel and 497 reservists from five states (Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, and South Dakota). Around 100 reservists will operate from Whiteman during the unit's UTA weekends.

The unit joins 11 others from multiple service branches who currently call Whiteman home.

"Whiteman is a perfect location for this Seabee unit," said Congressman Skelton. "Thanks to land expansion in years past, the base is a prime location for new missions and can provide the needed security for Seabees to train and operate effectively."

As the Armed Services Committee Chairman, Congressman Skelton has been instrumental in bringing multiple missions to Whiteman; most recently the addition of MQ-1 Predator drone aircraft, expected to be operational by Feb. 2011.

"It is my dream that Whiteman be the premier Air Force base in our country. The relocation of the Seabee unit to Whiteman represents yet another step toward fulfilling this goal," the congressman said.

Whiteman Airman saves AF Money

Cutting costs and saving money is at the forefront of many organizations' agendas. The law of supply and demand plays a major factor in the price of equipment; finding alternatives to scarce and pricey items is considered a significant win.

CSAF outlines way ahead

Editor's note: The Air Force's senior military leader re-leased his vision for the future in a recent CSAF Vector 2010 that outlined five priorities and the "way ahead" for Airmen to maintain these priorities. This is the second of a five-part series the Whiteman Warrior will present over the next several weeks. To read the Vector in its entirety, visit www.af.mil.

2. Partner with the Joint and Coalition Team to Win Today's Fight

The Air Force makes a unique, important contribution to today's fight. In addition to fulfilling traditional Air Force combat roles, Airmen perform admirably wherever and whenever required by carrying out medical evacuation, ordnance disposal, convoy security, and in many other vital roles. We:

- Delivered responsive, persistent ISR, increasing combat air patrols to 45 this year.
- Flew 105,000 close air support sorties since 2007, with historically fast response times.
- Deployed MC-12W Project Liberty aircraft to the theater in a record nine months.
- Since 2001, evacuated nearly 70,000 patients from the USCENTCOM AOR, dramatically improving the survival and recovery rates of wounded personnel.
- Selected 43 of our best officers for the elite Afghanistan-Pakistan Hands program.
- Commanded almost half of the 14 Provincial Reconstruction Teams in Afghanistan and provide 70 percent of the deployed contracting officers.
- Operated over 55 satellites providing continuous positioning, navigation, and timing; communications, weather, ISR and warning to US and allied forces world-wide.
- Partnered with Australia to expand the Wideband, Global Satellite Communications constellation, providing unprecedented levels of tactical command and control.
- Achieved initial operational capability in 24th Air Force for cyberspace support, defense, and force application, and designated them as the single commander of AFNETOPS.

Way Ahead

The Air Force will always be an integral part of Joint and Coalition operations. As we look ahead, we are likely to encounter more sophisticated hybrid adversaries and situations requiring enhanced integration across multiple domains. In irregular warfare and anti-access / area denial environments, the Air Force must continue to build partnerships with other air forces to bolster international cooperation, sustain powerful, global forces for stability, and ensure access to the global commons. I want Airmen to focus on the following areas:

- Enhance our training and operational flexibility for the command and control of air and space power, creating organizations and capabilities adaptable to any Combatant Commander or Joint Task Force.
- Strengthen the Joint Force Air Component Commander (JFACC) role as the Area Air Defense Commander (AADC) for Integrated Air and Ballistic Missile Defense.
- Improve our relationship with the Navy through the Air-Sea Battle concept, enhancing our integration and cooperation in countering increasingly advanced anti-access threats.
- Seek partnerships and base access agreements to mitigate anti-access challenges in key regions, and explore innovative means to project power when bases are threatened.
- Anticipate and plan for emergence of more sophisticated, state-sponsored irregular adversaries, to include development of more tailored approaches to command and control that increase integration of the full range of air Force capabilities with ground elements.
- Enhance our ability to train, advise, assist and integrate partner air forces, institutionalize Air Advisor training, and stand up an Air Advisor Academy.
- Develop and field the Light Attack/Armed Reconnaissance Aircraft (LAAR) and Light Mobility Aircraft (LiMA) to allow training with a broader array of aviation partners.
- Build stronger international air force cooperation, interoperability, and mutual support.

Taking the 'Air Force family' to a new level

Commentary by
Chaplain (Capt.) Gregory Brunson
Joint Base Charleston Chaplain

JOINT BASE CHARLESTON, S.C. (AFNS) – "Someone's knocking at the door again! Is it really time to go to breakfast?"

Those words crossed my mind many times, early in the morning as I woke to find the "Air Force mafia" standing outside my room. I would quickly grab my cover and step outside into the hazy Afghanistan morning. Every morning five company grade officers would go from room to room knocking on each other's doors trying to guess who was going to breakfast and talking about who stayed up to watch the Florida State University game to the early hours of the morning.

We called ourselves the "mafia" because we were five Air Force CGO's living in a predominantly Army world. We were more than just a group of co-workers. We were more than friends. You would be more correct to call us a "family." Together we celebrated each other's birthdays and anniversaries. More importantly, we created a team, a community, a place to belong.

We didn't always share the same interests. One captain served as the Air Force chair on an all Army morale, welfare and recreation committee. My chaplain assistant, who was an honorary sixth "mafia" member, and I joined the camp's all volunteer fire department.

Some might be surprised to find that we didn't share similar political ideas or even religious beliefs. We were a diverse group, made up of Democrats and Republicans; Jews, Roman Catholics and Protestants.

Those categories did not keep us from forming a community. They made us even stronger. We had created a culture of caring and a new way to connect with our Air Force family.

Air Mobility Command officials released a concept July 1, called Comprehensive Airman Fitness. The news release described it as a new approach and not a new program.

What I like about Comprehensive Airman Fitness is that it recognizes the need for a cultural change, a total shift in the way we think and act. We need to connect with each other and build a more resilient Air Force community that can stand up to the challenges we're facing.

Those stressors are real. High operations tempo, continued downsizing, deployments and the economy can take a toll on us. The good news is we are stronger than all of those challenges put together.

As a chaplain, I visit with Airmen who are dealing with real stress, but don't always have the resources to lean upon. They are hungry for connection. They want to be closer to their friends and family and are missing out on the greatest support system that's available. They want deeper relationships.

I admire the commanders and first sergeants who take risk and discover new ways to increase the bonds within their organization. They often try new things: adding a spin to their commander's calls, working with booster clubs to increase community, and celebrating their unit's heritage and their accomplishments.

For the Airmen who are reading this, I want to encourage you to reach out and find ways to get involved. Join a private organization like the Air Force Association, the Company Grade Officer's Council, the Air Force Sergeant's Association or the junior enlisted council. I am grateful for the friendship of five CGO's who became my adopted family. Make those connections that will last for a lifetime, beyond your Air Force career.

You will be stronger for it, more resilient.

And you know what? The Air Force will be stronger for it, too.

"Don't Ask, Don't Tell" survey a must to let Airmen viewpoints be known

By Tech. Sgt. Phyllis Hanson
Secretary of the Air Force Public Affairs

WASHINGTON (AFNS) - "Your opinion matters" is the view of Air Force officials on the "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" survey released July 7 to more than 98,000 randomly selected active-duty Air Force, Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve members.

Selected Airmen have received an e-mail with the survey from Westat, a third-party contractor, on behalf of the Department of Defense. Westat is a professional, independent pollster collecting and analyzing the data.

The confidential survey is not a referendum on whether or not to repeal the law, said Lt. Gen. Richard Y. Newton III, the deputy chief of staff for manpower and personnel.

"Rather, it's designed to assist leadership in assessing the impacts, if any, that the repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" might have on military readiness, military effectiveness, unit cohesion, and recruiting and retention," he said.

Airmen who receive the survey are encouraged to complete it because their inputs are critical for enabling DOD officials, and ultimately Air Force officials, to effectively implement policy changes, should Congress decide to repeal "Don't Ask, Don't Tell." Officials hope to have most of the responses back within 45 days of receipt.

The survey, consisting of 103 questions, should take no more than 30 minutes to complete, and personally identifiable information will not be linked or attached to an individual's answers. The survey does not ask questions about sexual orientation.

Some Airmen who receive the survey link by e-mail may mistakenly view it as "spam" since it originates from an e-mail address with a ".org" extension instead of a ".mil" or ".gov" extension.

"We want to assure Airmen who are randomly selected to complete the survey, that it's a legitimate request, and shouldn't be deleted," General Newton said. Reminder notices with instructions on accessing the survey will be periodically sent throughout the survey period.

Airmen who do not receive the survey can still share their thoughts concerning potential repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" through the online inbox at www.defense.gov/dadt, an Internet site accessible to common access card holders through www.af.mil or the Air Force Portal.

The online inbox allows servicemembers and their families to submit issues anonymously to the intra-department, inter-service working group, led by Army Gen. Carter F. Ham, the commander of U.S. Army Europe, and Jeh Johnson, the Pentagon's top lawyer.

If Airmen wish to engage in more frank and candid discussions regarding their personal experiences in the military and how they might be affected by repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell," a confidential communication mechanism has been developed to facilitate confidential online dialogue with trained moderators from Westat. This mechanism can be accessed in two ways: through a link at the end of the survey or at the end of the online inbox submission.

In total, almost 400,000 servicemembers have been asked to complete the survey. Their responses, along with feedback from the online and confidential communication mechanism, will give the working group a baseline of information that best represents the military's 2.2 million servicemembers and their families.

The DOD working group will provide a report to the secretary of Defense no later than Dec. 1 addressing issues, impacts and an implementation plan associated with a repeal of the law, should it occur.

Volunteer opportunities await Whiteman Youth

By Airman 1st Class Montse Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

High School age sons or daughters of active-duty Air Force members who are interested in learning new job skills before they go into the "real world" are encouraged to take part in the Youth Employment Skills Program.

The Air Force-wide program offers participants the opportunity to connect with their community by volunteering up to 250 hours over the course of their high school career. Students can earn up to $1,000 toward college or vocational-technical school by participating.

"It's an amazing opportunity for teens," said Kimberly O'Brien, teen coordinator for youth programs here. "It teaches teens life skills such as discipline, responsibility and job opportunities."

Additionally, for every hour volunteered, $2 will go to base youth programs to support recreational improvements, computer labs and other programs.

"It's a cool program," said Nickolas Crider, a volunteer at Outdoor Rec, son of Dianne and Master Sgt. William Crider, 509th Maintenance Squadron. "In the little time I've been here, it's taught me that not everything comes easy. It's a great way to use your time productively."

Ms. O'Brien said teens are able to volunteer in most base facilities. The most popular ones so far have been the Youth Center and Outdoor Recreation Center.

Most bases have the YES program, and hours accomplished volunteering can be transferred from base-to-base.

For more information about the YES program, contact Whiteman Youth Programs at (660) 687-5586.

Improved physical training uniform sized for both sexes

By Brad Jessmer
Air Force Uniform Office

WRIGHT-PATTERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Ohio (AFNS) – The new, improved physical training uniform, or IPTU, has seen many improvements from the current PTU and sizing also has improved for both sexes.

"We have received much feedback from the field," said Maj. Eric Habersberger, the deputy chief of the Air Force Uniform Office. "We have made a strong effort to meet needs and ensure our Airmen have a comfortable, durable and well-fitting uniform. Sizing is aligned closer to commercial, off-the-shelf sizing, unlike the current PTU."

To accommodate both men and women, new sizes of PTU shorts range from extra small to extra, extra large. They are made in a boxer style out of 100 percent polyester with a full-fitting anti-odor treated liner. The trunk inseam has been lengthened approximately one inch and side seam pockets have been added with closures. The waist elastic has been relaxed and also fitted with a barrel-lock drawstring for adjustable comfort.

The T-shirt is now available in a 100 percent polyester long sleeve and poly/cotton blend short sleeve. Both shirts contain a moisture management system that disperses moisture. The new polyester/cotton T-shirt also includes an anti-odor coating.

The running suit now has a "loose fit" for both men and women that allows more comfort and flexibility, while avoiding a baggy appearance. Both the pants and jacket contain a white 100 percent polyester mini-mesh anti-odor liner that disperses moisture and minimizes odor.

Sizes now available for the running pants range from XX-Small to XX-Large, with different lengths available in X-Short, Short, Regular, Long and X-Long for each size. The pants retain an elastic waistband that is relaxed for a comfortable fit with a barrel lock waist drawstring for adjustable tension. Pant pockets now have a Velcro closure. Each pant leg has a more relaxed elastic band and side zipper at the ankle to make it easier to dress over shoes.

The running jacket is available in sizes from XX-Small to XX-Large, with length variants of X-Short, Short, Regular and Long for each size. The hood has been removed as well as the arm vents, due to the breathability of the fabric. The two-inch reflective "V" has been upgraded to aid in greater visibility.

According to AFUO officials, by following label care instructions, each IPTU item is designed to retain its moisture management and reflectivity capabilities when laundered at home.

The complete IPTU is an optional uniform authorized for wear. According to a policy letter issued Oct. 28, 2009, by officials at Headquarters Air Force Manpower and Personnel (A1), even though the IPTU is made to be identical to the current PTU, components of the running suits are not to be mixed.

IPTU availability is based on several factors including duty location. Shipments to deployed locations will take priority, followed by Pacific and European theaters. Worldwide rollout of the IPTU trunks will be available through Army Air Force Exchange Service starting in late August, while the running suit will be available sometime late September. The IPTU T-shirt release date is still to be determined. According to AAFES officials, the IPTU will be in short supply at first. But once all military clothing stores have received shipments, the IPTU will be available via Internet purchase worldwide around October.

The current PTU, not the IPTU, is being issued to Airmen at basic military training.

For locations receiving Air Force clothing from Army stores, availability will be limited. However, IPTUs will be available through special order at the servicing military clothing store.

TRICARE Coverage for College Students

By Tyler Patterson
TriWest Healthcare Alliance

When children graduate high school and begin college courses, many may wonder how their TRICARE medical coverage is affected.

Using the following steps, continuing a dependant's coverage while at college can be easy and seamless.

1) Maintain Eligibility

An up-to-date record in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System is key to a child remaining eligible and avoiding unnecessary out-of-pocket costs and claims issues. Visit www.tricare.mil/deers to learn how to update addresses and other important information.

As long as children are enrolled as full-time college students and parents supply more than 50 percent of their income, they will remain TRICARE-eligible until age 23 or until they graduate, whichever comes first.

Parents should be aware that eligibility for TRICARE does not automatically continue; no matter which TRICARE plan is used, the servicemember must submit the proper paperwork to DEERS before their child turns 21 to continue coverage until age 23.

Children should also have a valid uniformed service ID card.

2) Check Availability

If a child moves away from home, the TRICARE program they were under may not be available in their new location.

Students enrolled in TRICARE Prime should use their benefits in TRICARE Prime Service Areas, usually near a military clinic. In the TRICARE West Region, you can confirm TRICARE Prime availability by checking "Prime Eligibility" in TriWest's Military Clinic Locator (www.triwest.com/locator). Students can transfer their Prime enrollment to the new location or start a new Prime enrollment there, and will access their care through a local primary care manager.

If Prime is not available, students can still access care through TRICARE-authorized providers using TRICARE Standard and Extra. There is no enrollment requirement to use TRICARE Standard and Extra. However, if your children previously had Prime coverage, they will have to disenroll from Prime. Disenrollment forms can be found at www.triwest.com.

3) Split Enrollment: Don't Pay Two Enrollment Fees

For retiree TRICARE Prime families, when a child attends college in a different TRICARE region, there won't be two enrollment fees. TRICARE allows retirees to "split" the enrollment and only pay one family enrollment fee. Retirees must contact the TRICARE contractor in their region and in their child's region to set-up split enrollment. To find regional contact information for TRICARE contractors, go to www.tricare.mil/contactus.

4) Plan for Vacations

If a child travels or returns home, TRICARE coverage follows. Prime students will have to coordinate non-emergency care with their PCM. For trips back home to the family's region more than 30 days, temporarily transfer enrollment to the new regional contractor. Students traveling outside of their region with Standard and Extra coverage don't need to transfer enrollment, but will still be responsible for their deductibles and cost-shares. Complete and file any claim paperwork with the region where the student lives.

Impact of Health Care Reform

Parents of college students are likely very interested in how the new Health Care Reform Act will impact their college-age children. Current age limits (21, or 23 if the dependent is a full-time student) are set by statute, therefore separate legislation would be required to change them. Legislation to extend TRICARE benefits to dependents up to age 26 is still pending, therefore the benefit remains unchanged at this time.

Airman's ingenuity prevents short circuit

By Heidi Hunt
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Cutting costs and saving money is at the forefront of many organizations' agendas. The law of supply and demand plays a major factor in the price of equipment; finding alternatives to scarce and pricey items is considered a significant win.

Staff Sgt. Donnecha Blackmon, 509th Maintenance Group Air Force Repair Enhancement Program lead circuit card repair technician, is one Airman whose work is nearly immeasurable to the wing according to Col. Matthew Kmon, 509th MXG commander.

Because of her industrial standard training, Sergeant Blackmon was able to successfully repair a non-procured A1

Staff Sgt. Donnecha Blackmon, 509th Maintenance Group, Air Force Repair Enhancement Program lead circuit card repair technician, practices on a training circuit card, July 21. Sergeant Stewart recently repaired an interface card and saved the Air Force $370,000 allowing uninterrupted avionics interface testing.

interface card for the 509th MXS avionics test station and avoided a cost of $370,000 for the next available assembly.

"Her efforts were vital in repairing one of three test stations in Air Force inventory and allowed the uninterrupted local repair capability and operational test of the actuator remote terminal, one of the heaviest demanded parts on the B-2," said Chief Master Sgt. Sam Hook, 509th MXG superintendent.

Sergeant Blackmon's former experience in back shop as a B-2 avionics technician has allowed her to identify the importance of the test equipment's value to the Air Force.

Sergeant Blackmon will say she was just doing her job, but she enjoys doing what she does and working with the best people in the Air Force

"Sergeant Blackmon aggressively pursues AFREP's mission and pushes her technicians to do the same," said Senior Master Sgt. Richi Buford, 509th MXG quality assurance chief inspector. "She takes pride in her quality of work and ensures others are meeting required standards. Additionally, she accepts challenges others shy away from and is truly a valuable member of Team Whiteman and the U.S. Air Force."

Sergeant Blackmon said her work is meticulous thus important to her.

"My job also allows me to uphold the integrity of the parts going into the B-2," she said. "I am overjoyed to know I helped the Air Force save money which can conceivably go towards the improvement of other Airman's workspace, equipment, and quality of life."

The squadron's leadership finds it easy to sing Sergeant Blackmon's praise.

"I couldn't be more proud of a troop that goes through industry standard training, takes those skills, seasons them with a can-do attitude and repairs assets that are critical to the B-2 mission," Colonel Kmon said. "Her enthusiasm, her professionalism and her ability to turn knowledge into results is the gold standard for all of us."

Ambulance Services: First response in emergency care

By Airman 1st Class Cody H. Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

The emergency medical team rushes to the ambulance after receiving a dispatch call reporting a middle-aged man having chest pains. The two medical professionals, an Independent Duty Medical Technician and an Emergency Medical Technician driver, crank-up the eight-cylinder diesel and blaze the sirens. Within the next few minutes, they will be on-scene providing the best health care possible.

A call to the 509th Medical Operations Squadron ambulance service could make the difference between life and death for a member of Team Whiteman.

The nine Airmen who make up the ambulance service team, cycle shifts of 24-hours on and 48-hours off, providing endless medical support for scheduled events such as official ceremonies and exercises to unplanned events such as in-flight emergencies and emergency calls.

According to Senior Airman Jacob Rosko, 509th Medical Operations Squadron ambulance service technician, the team receives anywhere from one to three calls on average per shift. Calls ranging from cardiac arrest to sports injuries keep the team busy throughout the day; however, before they respond to calls, the team starts the day off with a routine inspection of their equipment and ambulance, ensuring that when they receive their first call, they're equipped to handle any type of medical emergency.

Senior Airman Christopher Lopez, 509th Medical Operations Squadron ambulance service technician said EMTs typically go through three stages throughout the span of a call. Time could be the crucial difference between life and death, so the team has an under six-minute response-time goal for all calls they receive.

"The first stage, when we first receive the call, is when we anticipate what to expect when we arrive on-scene and brainstorm how to best access the situation," said Airman Lopez. "You also ask yourself; how fast can I get there? My biggest fear is not being able to find the patient."

The second phase is what takes place while the team is on-scene.

"The amount of training and preparation we do pays-off during the second phase," Airman Lopez said. "We know how to sustain, if not more, the patient until they are safely transported to an emergency room."

"[Once we transport the patient,] we reflect on how well the call went," said Airman Lopez, referring to the third phase. "We see what could have done differently and how to improve our performance."

During the team's downtime, Airman Rosko said they have additional duties to accomplish and assist other 509th MDOS staff when needed.

"If the clinic is undermanned, we can assist them in a number of things like immunizations since a lot of us are trained back-up technicians," he said. "Some EMTs are also independent duty medical technicians, so they have a list of medical jobs to continue to train and certify on while maintaining the ambulance service."

Team members are also certified CPR and SABC instructors and train firefighters on ambulance use.

"We constantly train to prepare for any situation," said Airman Rosko. "One day there could be an explosion with dozens injured, and I would be right there doing everything I could to help. Other days I could be filing papers."

"You have jobs where you go in knowing exactly what is going to happen throughout the day ... and then you have my job," he added. "What makes my job great is the fact that it's different every day."

"It's a good feeling ... knowing that we're here to care for more than 3,000 lives," said Airman Rosko.

DETER

Sifting through the sludge creates clean solutions

By Heidi Hunt

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

The impact of the gulf coast oil crisis has shown us the harmful realities when dangerous chemicals are released into the environment. In an effort to reduce pollution, Team Whiteman's is doing its part to decrease its environmental footprint.

To ensure water is up to the Missouri Department of Natural Resources standards and to guarantee Team Whiteman releases safe and quality water in to the earth, the 509th Civil Engineer Squadron Wastewater Treatment Plant works around-the-clock to treat all sanitary industrial wastewater generated on-base.

"Wherever you have people who live and work, you will have the need for water, in turn the need for proper treatment and disposal," said Paul Tracy, 509th CES plant foreman. "Our mission is to provide safe treatment of generated wastewater."

This industrial maze begins when wastewater enters the plant through a collection system encompassing more than 58 miles of sanitary and industrial sewer lines throughout the base. The wastewater can also be transferred from areas of low elevations, by one of its 40 wastewater pumping stations before actually entering the wastewater treatment plant.

It then makes its way through a cleaning process of primary settling clarifiers, trickling filters, final settling clarifiers and then through a tertiary treatment process that produces clean water to be returned to the environment.

"Each phase of the process plays a significant role to ensure quality control," said Mr. Tracy. "Every effort is made to ensure the water released back into the environment is the cleanest and highest quality. In addition to meeting the MoDNR standards, we work to provide the best customer service by providing the best treatment possible."

The final process is complete the water goes to the lab for additional testing.

"We test the wastewater to determine if the plant meets and exceeds the reductions for total suspended solids, biochemical oxygen demand and chemical oxygen demand," said Scott Lewellyn, 509th CE specialist. "From these analyses, our plant averages a 96 percent removal efficiency which is well above the 85 percent that the state requires."

According to Mr. Tracy, the team works hard to improve its mission and have recently installed ultraviolet light disinfection system that will give the facility the capability to disinfect the wastewater, by removing any remaining harmful bacteria in the wastewater.

"Once this system is finalized and approved through the MoDNR we will be able to meet any new regulations concerning disinfection of treated wastewater that the state imposes on treatment facilities," Mr. Tracy said. "Overall, we take many intricate steps to ensuring the water quality released is at the highest standards."

Airman First Class Barry Hochderffer, 509th Civil Engineer Squadron, draws a sample downstream from the treatment plant, July 22. This sample is the most crucial in the whole treatment process, measuring Whiteman's footprint on the local environment.

The clarity filter allows sludge to settle to the bottom of the tank while the clear water trickles out the sides and on to the next process.

FTAC transitions Airmen to the mission

By Airman 1st Class Torey Griffith
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Henry David Thoreau said, "things do not change; we change." The transition from the civilian lifestyle to the military lifestyle is one of the most drastic transformations a person could make in his or her life. One program, however, aims to transition Airmen to their first duty assignment efficiently, while setting the standards and expectations for achieving success in the military.

The First Term Airman Center program, founded in 1977 by Chief Master Sgt. Kevin Estrem, is a two-week class designed to transition new Airmen from a technical school environment to the 'functional' Air Force.

"These airmen have been through intense training at basic and tech school, and now it is time for them to understand what their Air Force career has to offer," said Tech Sgt. Mark Whalen, FTAC team leader. "They receive more than 36 briefings at FTAC to show them all the benefits they can get from the military and from Whiteman Air Force Base."

Ancillary training and briefings, ranging from financial planning to sexual assault awareness training, arm new Airmen with the information needed to build a successful career.

"When the Airmen return to their units, they should not have to leave to accomplish any ancillary training," said Tech. Sgt. Felicia Haecker, NCO in charge of FTAC. "The Airmen and their supervisors are able to concentrate on their Career Development Course and on-the-job training."

Sergeant Haecker sees the Airmen as potential future leaders of the Air Force, rather than nuisances or objects of ridicule.

"My favorite part of FTAC is getting to know the Airman, who they are and why they're here," she said. "These are an amazing group of individuals, who I feel don't get enough credit often times from those of us who have been in for a while."

"I love looking in their eyes and seeing that fire for the Air Force burning brightly," Sergeant Haecker said. "As an NCO, I feel that it's my job to keep that fire burning and keep them motivated."

But it's not all puppy dogs and lollipops. Sergeants Whalen and Haecker demand punctuality, proper customs and courtesies, and above all, professionalism.

"We have to be tough, but at the same time we have to be human and think back to how we felt as Airmen," Sergeant Haecker said. "I felt insignificant as a new Airman, and had the 'I am only an Airman' attitude. A great NCO helped me change that. I see that quite often here and have made it my personal mission to try and change that. Every person is important and we as NCOs need to make the Airman feel that way."

BCC links Airmen to surrounding communities

By Heidi Hunt
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Editor's note: This is the first of a series highlighting the BCC featured communities.

Henry Ford once said "Coming together is a beginning, keeping together is progress, and working together is success."

For more than 20 years, Whiteman AFB has been building and maintaining relationships within 18 surrounding communities through a community relations program called the Base Community Council.

"This council consists of representatives from the local area and is chartered to support Whiteman personnel," said Jesse Kellock, BCC president. "Working alongside the military is a wonderful opportunity for civilian BCC members to work towards mutual interest."

The benefit goes both ways.

A squadron from the 509th Bomb Wing is assigned a community to get Airmen involved in local organizations and work with community members on various projects and events.

The BCC is comprised of the citizens of Whiteman AFB, the cities California, Clinton, Cole Camp, Columbia, Concordia, Higginsville, Holden, Jefferson City, Kansas City, Knob Noster, La Monte, Lexington, Lincoln, Marshall, Sedalia, Warrensburg, Warsaw and Windsor.

BCC luncheons are hosted by one or more communities and are scheduled the first Thursday of each month. The next BCC is Aug. 5 and the featured communities will be Lincoln, Mo., Warrensburg, Mo. and Windsor, Mo.

Lincoln, Mo.

Lincoln is a small community near Highway 65, just north of Lake of the Ozarks and Truman Reservoir. Lincoln offers small town living with great schools and all the peace and quiet that comes with rural communities.

"With Lake of the Ozarks and Truman Reservoir so close,

Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars 2591 march in the community parade. Lincoln is a small community near Highway 65, just north of Lake of the Ozarks and Truman Reservoir. Located in Benton County, it could easily be described as "The Front Door to the Twin Lakes Area of Lake of the Ozarks and Truman Lake".

you will find great access to hunting, fishing and many other "on the water" activities," said Glen Nelson, BCC representative.

The 509th Medical Support Squadron and Lincoln support one another.

Warrensburg, Mo.

Warrensburg reflects diversity in the American lifestyle and is a historic hometown community. Warrensburg is home to the University of Central Missouri, Warrensburg Tigers and Old Drum.

"Warrensburg is a wonderful place to live as it offers so many things including affordable housing, four unique seasons, beautiful countryside, great school district and small town living yet close to Kansas City," said Rachel Martin, BCC representative.

"You will find a perfect blend of small-town friendliness and big-city culture as we combine the amenities of the constant churn of personnel from nearby Whiteman coupled with the consistent and every growing business community to make a community that serves as a melting pot for all," said Tammy Long, president of Warrensburg Chamber of Commerce.

The 393rd Bomb Squadron and Warrensburg support one another.

"The vast majority of our personnel live in Warrensburg making it the ideal sister community for our squadron," said Lt. Col. Sam White, 393rd BS commander. "We've been stationed here twice and the level of support from the Warrensburg community has been nothing short of outstanding. Specifically, the bonds forged through the Military Affairs Council have allowed local leadership better insight on Whiteman AFB activities and have also enabled base personnel to be more in tune with community events."

For more information log on to www.visitwarrensburg.org

Windsor, Mo.

Windsor is located in West Central Missouri, at the intersection of five state highways, on the Katy Trail, a 200 mile hiking and biking trail, and near Truman Lake, one of the Show-Me State's largest fishing and recreational lakes.

The 509th Maintenance Operation Squadron and Windsor support one another.

"The community support we receive from Windsor is exceptional – it makes a difference having someone like Mr Jesse Kellock fully engaged in supporting the B-2 and Whiteman missions" said Lt. Col. Matthew Snyder, 509th MOS commander.

Kellock, Windsor resident said it is the chosen home of more than 100 servicemembers families.

"We welcome all military to join us in the quiet and friendly community," Kellock said. "Windsor is very proud of the Farrington Park and Lake and attracts many people from the surrounding communities."

For more information log on to www.windsormo.org.

Military members are free to join the BCC. Civilians wanting to know more about membership fees can contact the BCC treasurer, Patty Sellers at (660) 563-3011.

Warrior Weekly Caption Contest

The Idea is simple. Each week, Whiteman Warrior readers will have a new photo that needs a caption. Readers of the Whiteman Warrior will then have a chance to submit their idea of the most fitting photo caption. The caption can be funny, cute, endearing, etc., as long as it is not disrespectful, profane or offensive.

this week are due no later than noon on Wednesday, and should be sent to whiteman.warrior@whiteman.af.mil with "Caption Contest" in the subject line.

Readers can submit more than one caption.

When submitting captions, readers should include rank, first and last name, and unit with their entries. Civilian participants, please submit first and last name.

FREE Classified Advertising in the Whiteman Warrior
READ ALL RULES
BEFORE PLACING AN AD

1. Advertising is free to all active-duty, guard and reserve military members and civil servants who work on base or at the MoARNG in Warrensburg only. Military or civil service rank must be included in the space for "rank." We do offer free advertising to retired military members.
2. Ads of a commercial nature such as baby-sitting, lawn maintenance, house cleaning, product sales, apartments or houses for rent, work-at-home opportunities or any other service in which the person makes a profit must be prepaid. Paid ads must be placed directly through the Sedalia Democrat at 1-800-892-7856, dropped off at 700 S. Massachusetts Ave., Sedalia, Mo., 65301 or e-mailed to theclassifieds@sedaliademocrat.com. They accept VISA, MasterCard, cash, personal check or money order.
3. Free ads are for one-time sale of personal items only. Free ads can't be placed for churches, groups, clubs, organizations or friends not affiliated with the military. Each item must be sold for $150 or less.
4. Only one free ad*, maximum 30 words, will be allowed to run at any given time by the same household, for a maximum of eight weeks. Ads over the 30-word maximum will be edited at the publisher's discretion. *People who are PCSing may place more than one ad and sell the items at any price.

5. Include your home phone in the ad so people can contact you. USE OF DUTY PHONES IN ADS IS AGAINST AIR FORCE REGULATIONS.
6. Print legibly, and place punctuation and spaces where necessary. Use only one word per line.
7. Free ads aren't taken over the phone. They must be dropped off at or mailed to the 509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs Office, 1081 Arnold Ave Blvd, Bldg 59, Whiteman AFB, Mo., 65305. Ads may also be faxed to 660-687-7948.
8. Many offices on base are using old forms**. If you would like a copy of the new ad form to keep in your office, call 687-6123 and we'll fax a new form for your use. Or, you can download it at <http://www.whiteman.af.mil/news/index.shtml> and click on "Whiteman Warrior Classified Ad Form."
9. Homes for sale that are listed with a realtor must be paid for. Only people who are PCSing and selling homes FSBO (for sale by owner) qualify as a free ad.
10. Free yard sale ads are for active-duty, guard, reserve and retired military members living on or off base. People who live on base must have their yard sale approved by the housing office first.
11. The deadline for placing new ads, canceling or making changes to ads is 10 a.m. Friday, one week before desired publication.
12. Ads that don't meet these guidelines will not run. Free advertising is a privilege extended to you by the publisher, and your cooperation is greatly appreciated. Submissions do not guarantee publication. Publication is on a space available basis.
