Tech. Sgt. David Shockley, 509th Maintenance Operations Squadron crew chief inspector, became the second enlisted member to fly in a B-2 Spirit Feb. 22.

Sergeant Shockley received the orientation flight for being recognized as the 509th Bomb Wing Crew Chief of the Year and Eighth Air Force Crew Chief of the Year for 2009.

“Both are impressive, especially considering the caliber of maintainers here at Whiteman alone,” said Lt. Col. Mark Pye, 13th Bomb Squadron commander and pilot of the orientation flight.

“Flying with a hand-selected warrior who represents both the backbone of our Air Force and the core of our stealth combat capability was an honor professionally and personally,” said Colonel Pye. “Frankly, I think I was the fortunate one here with this opportunity representing other aviators in rewarding just one of our many maintenance brothers and sisters in arms who work hard daily to provide this incredibly important combat capability to our nation.”

“I’ve been here a long time, 13 years, and I never thought me, a maintainer, would have the chance of flying in a B-2,” the sergeant added. “I know it’s been done once before, but to have my turn was exciting.”

Sergeant Shockley said he spent the entire day training and going through orientation.

“I was able to use the B-2 simulator, which by itself was awesome,” Sergeant Shockley exclaimed. “Then to top it off, I actually got to fly in the jet. It was fantastic.”

The flight took off around 4 p.m., and lasted about 30 minutes. The sortie flew to the east near Sedalia, Mo., and finished with a final approach from Green Ridge, Mo., to the south.

“Once I was in the plane and the wheels started rolling, my mind went blank,” Sergeant Shockley said. “Honestly, the minute we came off the brakes and started rolling forward, I lost my mind.

“As soon as we broke ground I started hooting and hollering,” he added. “I was trying to look at everything at once. It was such a rush!”

Sergeant Shockley appreciated seeing a B-2 flight from inside the cockpit.

“It’s been a long time and I’ve done a lot of work on the B-2, so to be able to fly in one and watch what the pilots are actually doing in the air, was a great experience,” Sergeant Shockley said. “I couldn’t be more grateful for all the work that was done to get me up in the aircraft.”

Being a Wingman essential to accomplishing the mission

Lt. Col. David Martinson

319th Missile Squadron commander

F. E. WARREN AIR FORCE BASE, WYO -- When I was in Baghdad in 2007, the war was in its most violent period since the fall of Saddam Hussein. I felt ill-prepared for the chaos and death that seemed to be persistent on a daily basis. I had left the Pentagon for the desert to be the number two man in Iraq's version of the Secret Service.

My mission was to keep the top seven Iraqi leaders alive. This was no small task and I had no idea that two months into the job I would become the man in charge of the entire operation.

Every day I would get intelligence reports from my staff on the various threats against our "Tier Ones," as the top seven leaders were known. More personally disturbing were reports about the threats against my team. We had no less than three distinct entities that had kidnapping warrants against us and I knew there were never any live prisoner exchanges with our enemy. There were many close brushes with danger. The constant rocket and mortar attacks and improvised explosive devices were a daily reminder. I was fortunate to have a great Wingman in Baghdad, who helped me cope with the stresses of being at war and being responsible for the lives of many. He was a member of the Australian Air Force, Squadron Leader Lewis Frederickson.

Frederickson kept me centered with his sage advice, sound wisdom and, most importantly, his tremendous humor that he shared with me daily. I appreciated his friendship and perspective because he helped me deal with the monotonous day-to-day, yet abruptly changing environment we had to work and live in. He listened when I needed someone to talk to and provided excellent advice when I was suddenly placed in charge when my boss was relieved of duty. He reminded me to focus on the mission and to take care of my people and, equally important, to take care of myself.

We talk about being a good Wingman in Air Force Global Strike Command; squadron leader Frederickson most definitely was mine in the worst of places.

When I returned from the war, I encountered a whole new set of challenges I had not anticipated. I had been away from my family for nearly nine months. I was disconnected from my friends and felt uninspired by the job I returned to. Additionally, I still had residual effects from the violence I had witnessed and experienced. It was difficult adjusting to family life again. Through all this another Wingman was there for me, Lt. Col. Dan McGibney. He will always be a wonderful American in my view.

Colonel McGibney and I worked together at the Pentagon. When I was in Baghdad, he made sure he kept in touch with me downrange and kept watch over my family at home. He was the first person outside of my family to greet me when I came home and went out of his way to ensure I felt I had someone to talk to. He could sense things were not quite right with me and in a nonintrusive way kept me engaged with acclimating to life outside the combat zone. His actions reinforced to me how vital it is we all have a Wingman we can count on.

Being a good Wingman makes a difference and helps keep our warriors mentally prepared and physically safe.

Every Airman has a role as a Wingman. All levels of command have a responsibility to be a Wingman. As a commander, I have the responsibility for the total welfare of the men and women assigned to my squadron. It is my duty to recognize when someone needs help and to direct them to the right place to get that help. Flight commanders, crew commanders, NCOs in charge and supervisors are the first line of defense for the Airmen they lead. They are in the best position to recognize the first signs of trouble and to listen and take action.

I encourage all Airmen to lead by example and to be a good Wingman. Take care of yourself and take care of your buddy. Most importantly, take action when you see signs of stress. Being a good Wingman is essential to accomplishing our wing mission of providing preeminent combat capability across the spectrum of conflict.

Airmen recognize National Women's History Month

By Airman 1st Class Montse Ramirez

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

They aren't just our mothers, daughters, sisters and friends. They are strong, courageous individuals who have not only cared for their loved ones, but have also fought for equality and their country.

In 1987, Congress declared March as National Women's History Month, since neither the day, nor the week they had previously assigned was enough to recognize the contributions women have made in the course of history.

"Women's History Month is an opportunity for us to recognize the contributions women have made to our Nation, and to honor those who blazed trails for women's empowerment and equality," said President Barack Obama, 2010 Presidential Proclamation.

The theme for this year's observance is "Our History is Our Strength."

We have been a part of military history since the American Revolution, when we served on the battlefield as nurses, laundresses and cooks. Women's involvement increased during World War I when we were given the opportunity to enlist in the U.S. Armed Forces.

By 1941, more than 400,000 American military women served at home and overseas in nearly all noncombat jobs. During World War II, the first women pilots, known as the Women Airforce Service Pilots, were organized and performed stateside missions as test pilots and anti-aircraft artillery trainers.

Throughout history, we have proven our strength and power by overcoming obstacles and therefore opening a path of opportunity for future women to follow.

One obstacle military women don't have to encounter anymore is having to choose between having a family or a career.

When women were first allowed to join the U.S. Armed Forces, regardless of whether they were married or not, if they became pregnant, they faced immediate discharge from the Air Force.

"I have been lucky to have such an amazing career without many obstacles," said Col. Kathleen Dunn-Cane, 509th Medical Group commander. "But I do remember during the first seven years of my career I worked a lot of 12-hour shifts and weekends and my biggest obstacle was figuring out how to juggle two young children, while managing my schedule at the hospital with my active-duty spouse. Not only did we have to deal with schedules, but my husband shut down two bases in Germany and had to relocate to a base a couple of hours from where I was, therefore, we had to maintain two households."

Courtesy photo

As time progresses, we continue to expand society's expectations and become the role models who inspire us.

Colonel Dunn-Cane said one of the women she admired during her career was Col. Julia Wyawn, her chief nurse at the time, whom to this day she looks up to.

"She really made an impact on me because she was the first female officer I had ever met who was married with children and able to balance both,"

Colonel Dunn-Cane said. "She is a huge role-model to me and one of the reasons I stayed in the Air Force."

Although women have been able to obtain nearly every job and position in the Air Force due to our perseverance, we are still restricted from serving in positions such as pararescue, combat controllers and those with direct ground combat units.

To this day, more than 286,000 women who serve in the U.S. Armed Forces continue to fight for our country and our place in society, leaving our footprints in history one step at a time.

NEWS BRIEFS

Semi-Annual Inventory

The 509th Munitions Squadron is conducting a semi-annual stockpile inventory from March 7-10. Any munitions issued or turned in must be done prior to or after the inventory. During this week the 509th MUNS will only process emergency requests, submitted in writing and approved by the group commander or equivalent. For more information, call (660) 687-8168.

2011 Community Assessment Survey

The Air Force is currently administering the 2011 Community Assessment Survey to gather thoughts about perceptions of living and working within Whiteman AFB community. Randomly selected personnel are asked to participate in the survey and results will be issued by AF leadership to improve services and to better meet the needs of servicemembers and their families here. The survey will be administered until mid-March and is anonymous. If selected for the survey, personnel are encouraged to participate. For questions, call (660) 687-2324.

My pay and tax hours

The Internal Revenue Service no longer mails tax packages. Individuals who don't have access to the defense finance and accounting services can create an account at www.mypay.dfas.com. This is a free service and those who need help establishing an account can call the finance office at, (660) 687-2006. The new location for the tax center is in Bldg. 59 and is open Monday - Friday, 8 a.m. - 4 p.m. To make an appointment, call (660) 687-5726. Due to limited spacing, personnel are encouraged to not bring children.

Legal office under construction

The legal office reception area is under construction until March 30. The temporary entrance is located across from the Mission Support Group commander's office, before the flags. The temporary number is (660) 687-2050.

Consolidated dorm manager's office

A sponsor may pick up a room key five duty days before an inbound Airman's arrival date. If an Airman arrives on the weekend and the sponsor does not have a room key then Airmen are to stay in lodging. Airmen may be reimbursed for up to 10 days. The sponsor may pick up a key during the following duty day from the consolidated dorm managers office in Discovery Hall. Dormitory in-processing is every Tuesday and Thursday at 9 a.m. in the CDMO. Airmen are to in-process on one of those following days immediately after arrival. Hours of operation are Monday - Friday, 7 a.m. - 4 p.m. and closed weekends and down days. For information, contact (660) 687-1668 or (660) 687-5662.

Local Airman goes the extra mile

By Heidi Hunt

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Going above and beyond the call of duty is more than just a military catch phrase; it's a way of life for some Air Force Global Strike Command Airmen. Many take it upon themselves to go the extra mile, but one Airman is going miles.

Staff Sgt. Brandon Rodriguez, 509th Force Support Squadron readiness technician, took it upon himself to make a difference in the lives of those with leukemia and lymphoma, by joining Team in Training, a running organization in Kansas City, Mo., to run for a cure.

He is scheduled to participate in a marathon June 5 in San Diego, Calif., and is raising funds. He'll be paired with a patient and run on their behalf to raise funds for their medical expenses and cancer medical research.

His drive for helping those with leukemia and lymphoma stems from his own personal battle with leukemia.

When he was 2-years-old, Sergeant Rodriguez was diagnosed with leukemia. By the age of six, he was in remission.

"Since then, I've always been adamant in trying to help others and get involved because I want to give back," he said. "I also wanted the opportunity to give them a sense of hope.

"I got involved with other cancer organizations 26 years ago, but this year I wanted to branch out and do something different," Sergeant Rodriguez said.

"I can identify with the patients and hope I can shed a little light on them because I've been in their position," he said. "I can sympathize and empathize."

Every week, Sergeant Rodriguez trains and runs three to five miles two to three times a week. He does his long runs early Saturday mornings, which are between five to 22 miles.

The motivation and inspiration behind his runs stem from the patients and his passion about the cause.

"I encourage others to get out of their comfort zones and get involved in the community and do something that's not about just them," said Sergeant Rodriguez. "It's not about me anymore, it's about somebody else."

Capt. John Frazier, 509th Bomb Wing executive officer and former 509th FSS-chief readiness and plans, said Sergeant Rodriguez' drive is an exceptional example of the human ability to not only rise above adversity, but stand-out as a shining star for others to emulate.

"By his willingness to give back his time and energy to raising leukemia and lymphoma awareness, he truly lives out the Air Force core value of 'Excellence in all we do' day in and out," Captain Frazier said.

"I look forward to the marathon and hope to bring others a sense of hope for the future," Sergeant Rodriguez said.

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan. -- Staff Sgt. Laura Burton was deployed to Afghanistan from April 17 to Nov. 25, 2010.

Her ears ring from hearing the screaming sirens for the first time on Kandahar Air Field, Afghanistan. She freezes up, focusing on the tornado of questions going through her mind. Confusion is the only word to describe her current state.

She shakes the shock away. Seeing her colleagues dropping to the ground and covering their heads, she uses the 'monkey see, monkey do' mentality, and follows their lead. Her face in the dirt, she fears for her life.

She had been told about deployments to Afghanistan, but seeing it first-hand was an experience no one could have prepared her for.

She is Staff Sgt. Laura Burton, 509th Force Support Squadron NCO in charge of the force management introduction program, an Air Force Global Strike Command member, Sergeant Burton left Whiteman April 17, 2010, for her first deployment to Afghanistan.

"The one thing no one told me about, and I don't want to scare anyone, was the rocket attacks," she said. "You learn quickly to hit the ground when you hear the alarm or an explosion."

Sergeant Burton said the rocket attacks were the most difficult aspect of deploying to Afghanistan.

"Rocket attacks are a serious threat," she said. "Before I arrived, we were told about a group of military personnel playing volleyball one day when the sirens went off.

They had never been harmed during these attacks before, so after complying with the alarm, they decided to continue their game. The one time they didn't seek shelter, was the time they were injured."

Sergeant Burton wants to inform all servicemembers who are ready to deploy to remember their training, use it, and their deployment will be a great experience.

While deployed she worked for the Army Corp of Engineers processing orderly room needs alongside civilian and Navy Personnel. She tended to Army evaluations, decorations, duty statuses and other personnel type work.

"It took some getting used to because the Army has a different method to their

Gun Safety: Facts you need to know

According to the Whiteman Air Force Base Air Force Instruction 31-101v2:

Storing Privately Owned Firearms and Ammunition:

Bachelor Quarters:

- ❑ No private firearms or ammunition will be brought into bachelor or transient quarters for any reason.
- ❑ Persons residing in these types of quarters will store their firearms or ammunition either in the SF Armory or off-base. Maintaining the firearm in Military Family Housing to circumvent registration or storage requirements is prohibited.

Military Family Housing (MFH):

- ❑ Privately owned weapons and ammunition will be securely stored in appropriately constructed storage containers with tamper-resistant mechanical lock to prevent access by children or unauthorized individuals.
- Alternately, a safety device such as a trigger guard may be used, as long as the above result is achieved. The owner must control the keys. Children are prohibited access to weapons unless supervised by parent or guardian at all times.

- ❑ Firearms will be stored in an unloaded condition.
- ❑ Detachable, box-type ammunition magazines will be stored in an unloaded configuration.
- ❑ No more than 1,000 rounds of rim-fire ammunition will be stored.
- ❑ No more than 500 rounds of center-fire ammunition of any single caliber, gauge or configuration will be stored.
- ❑ No more than 2,500 rounds total will be stored.

For more information about gun safety, reference the WAFB AFI 31-101v2, or contact (660) 687-4482.

442nd FW participates in combat-training exercise

By Capt. Lisa Kostellic
476th Fighter Group

NELLIS AIR FORCE BASE, Nev. -- The 442nd Fighter Wing participated in Red Flag 11-2 at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., Jan. 24 to Feb. 4.

Established 36 years ago and conducted at least twice a year, Red Flag is a large-scale exercise involving a wide variety of war-fighting capabilities engaging in simulated combat training over a span of two weeks. Additionally, Red Flag involves not only U.S. military personnel and assets but includes U.S. allied forces and their air assets as well.

Nellis AFB is the host to an exercise of this magnitude because it has the Nevada Test and Training Range, which is the U.S. Air Force's renowned military training area containing more than 12,000 miles of airspace and 2.9 million acres of land with nearly 2,000 potential targets. What makes the training area elite are the realistic threat systems and opposing "enemy" forces, called aggressors, providing Air Force participants the ultimate combat experience that cannot be replicated in any other peacetime environment.

"What they have here, you can't find anywhere else in the world apart from combat," said Maj. Kevin M. Boblet, 442nd Fighter Wing's Red Flag project officer and A-10 Thunderbolt II pilot. "Using a huge number of trained personnel, they present a scenario with a wide range of demands. The feedback we receive is priceless."

Major Boblet has been coordinating the wing's participation in Red Flag since April 2010. As acting detachment commander for the exercise, he facilitated the successful involvement of more than 180 wing personnel to include pilots, maintainers, life support technicians, intelligence specialists, logistics technicians and schedulers.

Red Flag involved a range of aircraft including attack, fighter, bomber, reconnaissance, airlift and aerial refueling. A typical day started with the air tasking order, which detailed the mission requirements for the next day's sorties. Once the ATO dropped, the deployed wing, or air expeditionary wing, went into action.

Pilots for each aircraft began planning their missions separately based upon their assigned air space and specific mission requirements. To ensure maximum mission success, the pilots, along with other operational support personnel, would meet in periodic coordination briefs throughout the day to synthesize their air efforts.

"A lot of coordination goes into one combat mission," Major Boblet said. "For example, the mission brief today had four coordination briefs preceding it."

While the operations personnel were mission planning diligently each day, maintenance and support personnel were doing their part to ensure every aircraft was fully operational and combat ready.

For the most part, it was business as usual for maintenance according to Tech. Sgt. Kenneth R. Campbell, 442nd Aircraft Maintenance Squadron crew chief. "As far as maintenance, it's work as normal, but I know the pilots are getting a lot of benefits out of this."

Sergeant Campbell said there was one enormous challenge for maintenance: Time management. He said something that would normally take an hour to get delivered at home could take up to six hours at Red Flag.

"Bombs are a good example. We'd load the day before at home, and here, we can't load any earlier than six hours prior to take-off," Sergeant Campbell said. "Launch and recovery is normal, but when you need something extra, it's a challenge."

The wing's main purpose for participating in Red Flag 11-2 is to provide U.S. Air Force reservists the opportunity to prepare for war in the most realistic conditions.

Lt. Col. Brian K. Borgen, 303rd Fighter Squadron commander, said the A-10 community, in general, has been supporting a war with very little ground-to-air threats. Red Flag provides attack professionals with the opportunity to train in the most realistic and intense environment available to U.S. Air Force personnel.

"Red Flag provided valuable training for all aspects of our organization," Colonel Borgen said. "It's a lot of hard work and much different than flying at home station, but it's been a phenomenal experience."

BCC: A civilian-military partnership

By Heidi Hunt
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

(Editor's note: Columbia, Mo. was highlighted in the Jan. 28 edition of the Whiteman Warrior and can be found on www.whiteman.af.mil. Due to inclement weather, the BCC is rescheduled to March 8).

The civilian and military partnership at Whiteman Air Force Base has been established here for the past 20 years. The group of more than 350 individuals representing 18 local communities meets here once a month to reinforce this relationship.

"This council consists of representatives from the local area and is chartered to support Air Force Global Strike Command Whiteman personnel," said Jesse Kellock, BCC president. "Working alongside the military is a wonderful opportunity for civilian BCC members to work toward a mutual community interest."

The benefit goes both ways.

A squadron from the 509th Bomb Wing is assigned a community to get Airmen involved in local organizations and work with community members on various projects and events.

The BCC is comprised of the citizens of Whiteman AFB, the cities California, Clinton, Cole Camp, Columbia, Concordia, Higginsville, Holden, Jefferson City, Kansas City, Knob Noster, La Monte, Lexington, Lincoln, Marshall, Sedalia, Warrensburg, Warsaw and Windsor.

BCC luncheons are hosted by one or more communities and are scheduled the first Thursday of each month. The next BCC is March 8, and the featured communities will be Columbia, Mo. and California, Mo.

California is a family-oriented community, home to more than 4,000 residents and is strategically located in the central Missouri area, with access to business centers, shopping, activities, beautiful parks and the Moniteau County Fair according to www.cityofcalifornia.com.

"When the 325th Bomb Squadron was formed, California had not yet been matched with a squadron, so that match was made," said Joe Scallorns, BCC representative. "Early in the relationship, the Rural Fire District of California was building an additional firehouse. A number of volunteers from the 325th and other squadrons joined the local volunteers and they raised the building in one day. A couple of years later they were building a new firehouse in the southern edge of the district and volunteers from the 325th once again joined the locals and built the second one. The 325th was changed to the 13th but the relationship remained unchanged."

The 13th Bomb Squadron and California support one another.

The 13th BS, known as the Grim Reapers, is a team of professional warriors providing combat ready resources in support of America's interests. They support the combatant commanders to achieve unsurpassed global strike and global response capabilities around the globe -- anytime, anywhere, with the airpower to achieve campaign objectives.

"The relationship built and fostered through the years between our sister community of California and the 13th BS Grim Reapers and our predecessors, the 325th BS, is mutually beneficial," said Lt. Col. Mark Pye, 13th BS commander. "California's BCC representatives and civic leaders' unyielding support and hospitality has helped both our military members to better engage with our fellow citizens and make a positive difference in their community; it has also provided opportunities to impart how our Airmen's daily efforts aim to serve our nation. It is truly a 'win-win' proposition."

Military members are free to join the BCC and civilians wanting to know more about membership fees can contact the BCC treasurer at (660) 563-3011.

Vacations abroad call for precaution

By Airman 1st Class
Cody H. Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

As the last trickle of snow melts away, the thermometer rises and winter draws to an end at this Air Force Global Strike Command base, many plan for spring and summer vacations.

These vacations may lead some across an ocean or the United States border, and if that is the case, there are safety and precautionary measures that must be made prior to the trip.

All Air Force military personnel, civilians, dependent family members and contractors when supporting Department of Defense operations in accordance with contract provisions and outside of the United States shall comply with theater, country and special clearance requirements before traveling outside the continental United States, according to the DoD.

"When traveling to an area outside the continental United States, the key is plan ahead and be aware of the requirements for the country(ies) you intend to visit," said Robert Striegel, 509th Bomb Wing anti-terrorism officer. "Some combatant commanders have added additional requirements before receiving permission to visit a country within their area of responsibility, such as a 30-day lead time."

There are also restrictions for countries dangerous to servicemembers, civilian hires, and their families. According to a policy letter from Sept. 8, 2010, 509th BW personnel are prohibited from travelling to or through any portion of Mexico. Mr. Striegel said those who plan to travel to Mexico and are not assigned to the 509th BW should contact the 509th BW AT office for additional Air Force North restrictions.

The 509th BW offers these tips when leaving the OCONUS area:

-Review the DoD Foreign Clearance Guide at <https://www.fcg.pentagon.mil/>. Read 'section B, leave requirements.'

-Complete all necessary training directed by the Foreign Clearance Guide.

-Contact the 509th BW AT office at (660) 687-3044, or (660) 687-6820, to schedule a country briefing.

-If you are briefed to a Special Access Program there are additional restrictions and reporting requirements, ensure you contact your security manager a minimum of 30 days prior to travel.

In addition to providing military members the appropriate threat briefing, the AT office is available to provide briefings to family members traveling to an OCONUS area. For more information, call the 509th BW AT office.

process, but it didn't take long and the experience was great," she said. "The deployment taught me the different cultures of our military branches, which was neat.

"You meet people from different bases and career fields and really understand how we're all there for the same common goal," she added. "We had every branch of our military there, along with foreign militaries."

The base is supported by every U.S. Armed Forces branch and multiple NATO forces.

"I've been to a dozen different countries and never left Afghanistan," she laughed, explaining her interaction with the variety of foreign military personnel and compounds on Kandahar Air Field.

Sergeant Burton said learning the ins-and-outs of the Armed Forces was great, but her supervision was the best part of her deployment.

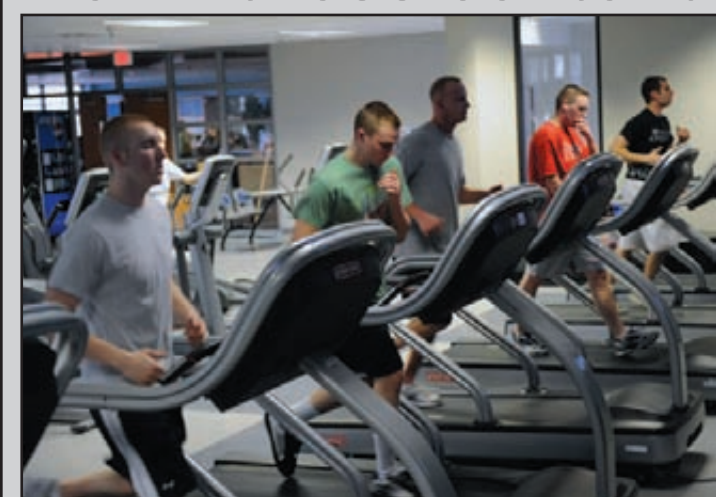

"My supervision taught me a lot throughout my deployment," she said. "I learned how to be a better NCO, what to expect from situations and where to find the answers to problems.

Throughout the six-month deployment, she only had time to miss a few things.

"I missed my husband, my cat ... and a day off," she laughed. "It was worth missing them for awhile though.

"If the experience is anywhere near this one, I'd love to go back," she concluded. "It was such a positive experience. I don't want to sound cliché, but it was literally life changing."
