Troops to receive full mid-month pay

By Jim Garamone

American Forces Press Service

All servicemembers will receive their full mid-month pay they have earned in their paychecks today, said Pentagon spokesman Marine Col. Dave Lapan. "It may be in two separate payments, but everyone will receive their full allotted pay."

Confusion arose about the April 15 payday due to the threatened closure of the U.S. government. Administration and congressional leaders came to an agreement that ended that action late April 8.

The Defense Finance and Accounting Service had posted "net pay advice" to some servicemembers, telling them what to expect in their accounts.

"Those net pay advice statements were made ... before we knew there was an agreement to fund the government," Colonel Lapan said. "When those were posted they only showed partial payments."

Officials urge servicemembers to check their end-of-month leave and earnings statements carefully. The normal end-of-month statements will be posted to accounts April 22.

The finance and accounting service has restored access to all leave and earnings statements, net pay advice or advice of pay for servicemembers on the myPay website.

For more information, visit the myPay website at <https://mypay.dfas.mil/mypay.aspx>.

Deal averts shutdown, normal government operations continue

By Jim Garamone

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON (AFNS) -- Government agencies are continuing normal operations after the administration, the Senate and the House of Representatives agreed to a fiscal 2011 budget.

The continuing resolution expired April 8, but the Senate and House passed a short-term funding bill that will allow both houses to finalize the full-year spending bill.

"This agreement between Democrats and Republicans on behalf of all Americans is on a budget that invests in our future while making the largest annual spending cut in our history," President Barack Obama said from the White House. "Like any worthwhile compromise, both sides had to make tough decisions and give ground on issues that were important to them. And I certainly did that."

There will be no interruption in operations for the Defense Department, DOD officials said. Servicemembers and civilian employees will receive their pays as normal, and no operations will be curtailed or eliminated.

"This is good news for the American people," President Obama said during an address from the White House. "It means that small businesses can get the loans they need, our families can get the mortgages they applied for, folks can visit our national parks and museums, and hundreds of thousands of Americans will get their paychecks on time, including our brave men and women in uniform."

The agreement calls for $38.5 billion in cuts from the government budget. This is $79 billion less than what the president proposed originally in February 2010.

"Some of the cuts we agreed to will be painful," the president said. "Programs people rely on will be cut back. Needed infrastructure projects will be delayed. And I would not have made these cuts in better circumstances. But beginning to live within our means is the only way to protect those investments that will help America compete for new jobs, investments in our kids' education and student loans, in clean energy and life-saving medical research. We protected the investments we need to win the future."

President Obama thanked House Speaker John Boehner and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid for their leadership in the process.

"It's my sincere hope that we can continue to come together as we face the many difficult challenges that lie ahead, from creating jobs and growing our economy to educating our children and reducing our deficit," the president said. "That's what the American people expect us to do. That's why they send us here."

Had the government shut down, officials expected around 400,000 DOD employees to be furloughed and problems with pay and other fiscal obligations. The president announced the deal less than an hour before the continuing resolution would have run out and operations would have ceased. The last government shut-down occurred in 1996.

Total Force Integration in action

Lt. Col. Mark A. Riselli

509th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron commander

The last eight weeks have seen a blistering amount of activity for my squadron and many other units at Whiteman Air Force Base. We successfully redeployed personnel, equipment and aircraft from Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., to Whiteman AFB just in time to host the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, Gen. Norton Schwartz. We participated in a Weapons Standardization Evaluation Program, Large Force Exercise, passed a Limited Nuclear Surety Inspection and supported multiple munitions test sorties. We also hosted the Commander, Air Force Global Strike Command, Lt. Gen. James Kowalski, played a key role in Operation Odyssey Dawn and welcomed a Russian delegation into our squadron for the first visit under the new START treaty.

This rapid-fire succession of events tested our preparedness, training and overall ability to execute our bottom line mission: deterrence, assurance and generating combat sorties when tasked by the National Command Authority.

How did we accomplish all of these complex and diverse tasks? The answer: hard work coupled with teamwork between 509th and 131st Bomb Wing personnel. After more than three years of working to integrate our two wings, Operation Odyssey Dawn served as a final examination (of sorts) and demonstrated our progress.

From beginning to end, 131st Bomb Wing personnel served alongside members of the 509th Bomb Wing to ensure mission success. Maintenance personnel from the 131st Air National Guard were the first to load munitions on B-2's assigned to destroy Libyan military targets. ANG aircrew members were among the line-up of pilots that participated in planning and executing the mission.

As I stood on the flightline with my 131st Aircraft Maintenance Squadron commander counterpart during preparation for Operation Odyssey Dawn, Total Force Integration was reality. The seams between our two wings were far less evident than when the 131st arrived three years ago.

While we will continue to pursue greater partnership between our wings, it may be time to drop the "I" in TFI at Whiteman AFB. When it comes to the operations and maintenance mission areas, Whiteman's two bomb wings are a Total Force.

Finally, as the history books now record, our recent B-2 combat sorties were on-time and on-target. The men and women of both the 509th and 131st Bomb Wing's can be proud of the page of military aviation history that they helped to write.

Don't just stand there ... Do something

By Ann Beem

509th Bomb Wing Sexual Assaults Response coordinator

Are you a bystander? A bystander is someone in a crowd who "stands by" and does nothing when they notice a problematic situation or behavior even though they may find the behavior to be offensive. A bystander does not protect the values of safety, trust and honor that are central to our community.

Sexual Assault does not happen in a vacuum. How many times have you been at a party or with a group of friends and witnessed something that made you feel uneasy? Maybe it was someone pushing another person to leave with them, or someone encouraging someone else to drink way more than they should, or maybe you saw a friend slap his or her date. What would you do?

You might be thinking, "That's none of my business." Or, you may think saying something would be sticking your nose in someone else's business. Many people feel reluctant to intervene in a situation because:

- ❑ They are afraid of making a scene or feel as though a person would ask for help if it were needed.
- ❑ No one else is helping; it must not be a problem.
- ❑ People who are sober don't think this is a problem, maybe I'm wrong?
- ❑ My friend is really responsible and he's not intervening... why should I?

Many people do not intervene in a potentially dangerous situation because they are looking to others for cues on how to act or they believe someone else will intervene.

If you stay silent you may be part of the problem.

Survivors of sexual assault and interpersonal violence are often silent about the abuse they endure. Abuse rarely happens in a room full of people, but bystanders often understand warning signs or see red flags that a situation is about to become violent or abusive. Stepping in or distracting the abuser could possibly prevent or minimize the abuse. Keep the person safe from escalating danger and let him or her know that help is available.

Be on the look-out for potentially dangerous situations and learn how to recognize indicators of potentially dangerous situations. Here are some examples of the red-flag behaviors related to sexual assault:

- ❑ Inappropriate touching
- ❑ Suggestive remarks
- ❑ Testing boundaries
- ❑ Disregarding set boundaries
- ❑ Inappropriate intimacy
- ❑ Attempts to isolate someone
- ❑ Pressuring someone to drink
- ❑ Violent behaviors
- ❑ Targeting someone who is visibly impaired

A good way to assess the situation is to ask yourself, "If I were in this situation, would I want someone to help me?"

U.S. Air Force graphic

If a situation makes us uncomfortable, we may try to dismiss it as not being a problem. You may tell yourself that the other person will be fine, that he or she is not as intoxicated as you think, or that the person is able to defend him or herself. This is not a solution! The person may need your help more than you think!

When in doubt, trust your gut. Instincts are there for a reason. When a situation makes us feel uncomfortable, it is a generally a good indicator that something is not right.

It is better to be wrong about the situation than do nothing.

To be clear: intervening is not about making decisions for people, and it doesn't mean that you have to physically separate the individuals or get in a fight. It could be as simple as interrupting the situation by asking something as non-threatening as, "Where is the bathroom?", "Could you tell me what time it is?" or even asking directly "Are you OK?" This interruption could provide an opportunity for someone who is feeling cornered to slip away from the situation or change the course of events that might have been about to happen. Your concern and action may be all that is needed in that situation to prevent that person from becoming a victim.

The point is, if you see or know of a violent or abusive situation do something. Break the silence! It could change the course of someone's life forever.

April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month. The Sexual Assault Prevention and Response office is hosting a Take Back the Night Walk today. The Take Back the Night walk began as a way to protest the violence that women experienced while walking in public at night. The purpose of these marches is to speak out against this violence, and raise community awareness as a preventive measure against future violence. We will meet at the fitness center track at 7:15 p.m. and then walk to the pavilion area at Skelton Park to enjoy free food, music and fun. Please bring the family and come out and join us to support this very important cause.

For more information on bystander intervention, sexual assault prevention or to report a sexual assault, call the SAPR office at (660) 687-2324 or (660) 687-7272 to reach the 24/7 confidential hotline.

CARE enough to help assault victims

By Airman 1st Class Cody H. Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

You'd like to think members in the U.S. Air Force and their surrounding communities don't have to deal with sexual assault, but in reality, it is a common crime even in military communities.

The Caring Advocates Ready and Empathetic program was revived in November 2010 to support members of this Air Force Global Strike Command base who have suffered sexual assault. CARE is an organization designed to help victims of domestic and sexual assaults by providing financial assistance.

"We are here to help offset the financial burden for victims that might need to stay in a hotel over night or receive child care," said Master Sgt. Monica Hamm, CARE president. "We understand what they're going through and want to help them through this difficult time in their life."

Sexual Assault and Response Program victim advocates identified the need for separate funds to help victims of sexual assault, and because of this need the CARE program was built.

"Sometimes victims need to leave their homes to get away from the perpetrator," Sergeant Hamm said. "These victims might not have the ability to access money prior to their departure."

Sergeant Hamm encouraged victims to take advantage of the program if put in an unfortunate circumstance.

"We're here to help anyone in need after a sexual or domestic assault," she said.

CARE is always open to volunteers for the program, according to Sergeant Hamm.

"We have meetings the second Tuesday of every month at 1 p.m., in the SARC's conference room," she said. "Anyone interested can help. You don't have to have prior experience."

Those interested in volunteering should call (660) 687-3937.

Recycling

Center helps environment

By Airman 1st Class Montse Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Located in an understated, quiet area with more than 20 metal bins and several parked trucks, it would be easy to assume this square lot is just another working site.

The lot, however, is a way this Air Force Global Strike Command base continues to do its part to help the Air Force stay eco-friendly. It helps not only the base and the community but also the earth.

The recycling center is where trash is turned into cash. Thousands of dollars are saved by recycling instead of having trash companies haul away our junk.

Mark Davis, recycling center supervisor here, said during the 2009-2010 fiscal year the recycling center processed more than 560 tons of recyclable material, which would have cost more than $12,000 to be hauled away by a trash company, and was sold for $90,248 to outside companies.

There are three ways Team Whiteman members can recycle. They can drop off their recyclable materials at the corner of 3rd Street and McConnell Avenue on base, at a trailer in the Whiteman Commissary parking lot (currently located west of the Whiteman Exchange due to parking lot construction until June), or at designated drop-off points and have the recycle center members pick it up.

Mr. Davis said it's a win-win situation. The revenue collected is deposited into a specific account from which the expenses of the program are paid and some goes to morale, welfare and recreation projects on base. Additionally, it is a way everyone can help keep our environment cleaner.

"It's a harsh truth but we are eventually going to run out of resources on earth, so it's important for us to do our best to make them last as long as possible," Mr. Davis said. "By recycling we are re-using materials instead of producing new ones."

The recycling center accepts different materials, from paper and aluminum to plastic. For each category of recyclable material there are different sections that should be separated, such as colored and clear plastics.

Mr. Davis, a 40-year recycler, has worked in the recycling center for more than eight-years and said he is amazed at how committed people are to recycling.

"Rain or shine, they bring their material," Mr. Davis said. "It would be great to see more of that commitment go around."

Anyone with base access can bring their recyclables to the recycling center. It is open 24 hours a day for drop off, and personnel are available from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Patrons are asked to follow instructions before dropping off their recyclables because it makes the sorting process easier, and customers are encouraged to clean their recyclables prior to recycling.

Above: Mr. Mark Davis, head supervisor at Whiteman's Recycling Center leans against a recycling dumpster while waiting for the next load of recyclables to arrive April 11. Airmen and their families using the recycling center can help save thousands of dollars by keeping trash companies from having to pick up the waste while helping the Air Force stay eco-friendly.

squadron providing fuel, onward movement and airlift to Afghanistan,” said Captain Ciro.

Her efforts contributed to setting a record for air refueling mission support during the Afghan elections, and establishing long range fuel sustainability that prevented the evacuation of the KC-135 fleet.

“I directed the movement of 224,461 U.S. and coalition military forces, directly setting the highest record passenger move of 55,000 passengers in a month,” she said. The captain also directed 30,000 troop surge operations and finalized the airlift of 727 Mine Resistant Ambush Protected All-Terrain Vehicles (MATV) to warfighters in Afghanistan.

The importance of her mission in a deployed location and at home station is personal in nature, according to Captain Ciro.

“I am an officer in the U.S. Air Force and the importance of my mission is to know the demands of the operations, set the pace, provide the people with the tools to do what they are trained to do and to serve,” the captain said.

Captain Ciro said that each day there was always a new operational demand to work on, a Distinguished Visitor to welcome, a briefing to give, a trip off base to provide humanitarian assistance or represent the TCM at an event, a call in the middle of the night, or something new to deliver.

“Every day was fun and brought a new meaning to the mission,” she said “If I had a ‘typical day’, I would have been bored and miserable.”

Overall Captain Ciro said the best part about her deployment was working with the community.

“I volunteered to lead and was elected president of the Manas Area Benefit Outreach Society (MABOS) which is the largest private organization at the TCM,” she said. “The organization was founded eight years ago by a group of military members who saw the need to reach out to a community in Kyrgyzstan that lacked the basic standard of living.”

Captain Ciro led 22 focus group leaders and managed 10 Kyrgyzstan organizations sponsored by MABOS—including the Babushka Adoption Foundation, Children’s Hearth Ward, Children’s Cancer Center, Center for the People, Manas Social Village and the WWII Veterans provides them with food.

“I thought I was going to change the lives of others in need, but they changed my life,” she said. “The people of Kyrgyzstan are both wonderful and great to work with.”

Col. David Zorzi, 376th Expeditionary Mission Support Group commander, spoke highly of the captain’s efforts and said her commitment to the Wing’s Humanitarian Assistance program was further evident as she volunteered to spend two extra weeks deployed to help establish the wing’s Theatre Security Cooperation (TSC) Division.

“Capt. Ciro is a very caring and dedicated Airman,” said Col. Zorzi. “She’s fantastic at fostering camaraderie and esprit de corps.”

This was Captain Ciro’s first deployment as an LRO after cross-training into the field so she could deploy more.

“I look forward to another deployment,” she said. “I couldn’t have asked for a better team of professionals to work with, to have fun with and learn from.”
