Self-empowerment: owning your own path to success

By Lt. Col. Michael O. Walters
Commander, 325th Weapons Squadron
USAF Weapons School

While this article is relevant to most readers, my intended target audience is the young Airman. I'm fairly certain that at this stage of your budding career, you've received a multitude of advice from many different sources on paving a solid path to being successful in the USAF. So, consider me plus one on the list of "have you thought of this".

Most of you have found yourself in a new environment, navigating unknown terrain and obstacles, trying your best to meet your supervisors' and commanders' expectations. All this takes place during a very dynamic, uncertain time for the Air Force, with many changes occurring to career fields, manning and deployments. To say it's difficult to determine how best to launch yourself on a successful trajectory in your career is an understatement. In my experience, there's no "one sure path" to success. What I WILL say is, there is one common denominator to the multiple paths to success --- YOU.

It's YOUR life, OWN it. Own the decisions, the successes and failures. Tenants of success include pride, professionalism and initiative. Take pride in your work, the little things. Success isn't in and of itself doing one outstanding project, or a handful of stand-out bullets on an EPR. Pride in your work, in doing the ordinary things extraordinarily, every day is a critical principle to propelling yourself along that successful path. Equally important is SUSTAINING that work ethic, which eventually becomes your "norm" and has a positive impact on those around you.

"Professionalism" is something that, while you may not be able to rattle off its definition, you know it when you see it. You chose to be a part of the Air Force, something bigger than yourself. Skill, competency, effectiveness and adherence to the core values of the Air Force are all parts of that professional tenant. Professionalism is the thread that keeps the fabric of OUR Air Force together. Short cuts, bad decisions and failure to abide by the standards you swore to uphold risk that fabric unraveling, greatly impacting the mission.

There's nothing as impressive from my perspective as a SQ/CC than to watch a young Airman take initiative. The maturity and confidence in oneself, and in his or her abilities to take the initiative to produce, solve problems and make something happen are essential. As we become a smaller, leaner force, the ability and drive to take the initiative becomes more important to our operating effectively and efficiently. Much more will be expected from us all. Hand in hand with taking initiative is not being afraid to make a mistake. Your supervisors and commanders have fostered an environment where you should be able to learn and develop. Fear of failure breeds complacency, and suppresses creativity and initiative. If allowed to atrophy, a creative mind and forward moving attitude will take you down a path of mediocrity and a willingness to "settle". I'd ask that you look at the leaders you admire, and observe how and why they took calculated risks. As the old adage goes, "Nothing ventured, nothing gained".

I was once told, "...you'll more often than not regret the things you didn't do, more than the things that you did." We are all offered many opportunities in our careers and lives to embrace. Some of those opportunities are once and gone. The responsibility lies with you to prepare, identify, and excel when those occasions arrive. Avoid the pitfalls associated with the "paths to failure"...self-entitlement, self-pity, and a defeatist attitude. It's your life.

Hispanic WWII pilot remembered

Master Sgt. Javier Porras
509th Medical Squadron

Oscar Perdomo was born in 1919 to Hispanic parents in El Paso, Texas. His father had been an officer in General Pancho Villa's Division del Norte.

His family moved to Los Angeles, California in the mid-1920s. Perdomo was commissioned a second lieutenant and awarded his pilot wings at Williams Field, Arizona, January 7, 1944.

After serving as a flight instructor, he completed P-47 Thunderbolt training, and was assigned to the 464th Fighter Squadron of the 507th Fighter Group in October 1944, and then deployed to Ie Shima, in the Pacific, in June 1945. Perdomo flew just 11 combat missions before the war ended, and he became the last "ace in a day" of World War II when he destroyed five Japanese aircraft during one mission on August 13, 1945. Perdomo served in the reserves after the war and returned to active duty during his tour in Korea. He left the Air Force in 1958 as a major.

He passed away in March 1976 at the age of 56.

His Distinguished Service Cross Citation reads:

"First Lt. (Air Corps) Oscar F. Perdomo (ASN: 0-763328), United States Army Air Forces, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy while serving as Pilot of a P-47 Fighter Airplane in the 464th Fighter Squadron, 507th Fighter Group, Twentieth Air Force, in aerial combat against enemy forces on 13 August 1945, during an air mission near Seoul, Korea. On that date, 1st Lt. Perdomo engaged a superior number of enemy aircraft, shooting down five in this one battle to become an ACE in a day. First Lt. Perdomo's unquestionable valor in aerial combat is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself, the 20th Air Force, and the United States Army Air Forces.

General Orders: Headquarters, U.S. Forces-Pacific, General Orders No. 112 (1946)."

NEWS BRIEFS

DEA's National Prescription Drug Take-Back Day

Do you have old medicines in your medicine cabinet? Not sure how to get rid of them properly? We have the answer for you! The 509th Security Forces Squadron and the 509th Medical Group will be collecting old, expired, and unwanted prescription medicines. These medicines, if improperly used, can be potentially dangerous. They can cause accidental poisonings, especially in homes with children or pets. Also, prescription drug abuse is a growing problem in the United States. Prevent these accidents in your home by bringing your old or unwanted medicines to the Whiteman AFB Base Exchange entrance on September 27, 2014 between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Security Forces and pharmacy personnel will be present to take back medicines and answer any medication disposal questions. This service is free and anonymous, no questions asked. Do your part to protect our Air Force family and bring your old medicines to the Whiteman AFB Prescription Drug Take-Back Day site!

Leaders,

I know that communication is a challenge at every level in our Air Force. Not all Airmen "speak the same language" and we have to constantly adapt how we communicate to ensure our Airmen are getting the information they deserve. At my All Calls throughout the Air Force, I am repeatedly asked "Where can I get current and accurate answers to the questions my Airmen are asking?"

It may seem basic, but the two top sites you should use are the AF Portal (<https://www.my.af.mil/>) and Air Force Link (af.mil). I also recommend the "AF Story" SharePoint site (<https://cs.eis.af.mil/afpa/AFStory/Programs/Tell.aspx>) for leaders. Much of the SAF/PA information that is directly relevant to your communication efforts is available, including Commander's Call Topics, AF Story, quarterly and supplemental talking points, communication plans, and public affairs guidance (PAG) on current issues, decisions, incidents or policy changes impacting the Air Force, Airmen or families.

We will continue to move forward in highlighting key issues with front page links, reducing mouse clicks and making these sites more user friendly, but the bottom line is that the information is out there! Leaders get one chance to tell the Air Force story and must be willing to seek out and demand answers for their Airmen!

Please share these websites with your team, including spouses--we all have a role in communicating, and demanding, answers for our Airmen. Thanks for what you do and thanks for making a difference every day in the lives of our Airmen.

Pregnancy and your teeth

By Dr. Jon R. Willison
Captain, USAF Dental Corps,
Whiteman AFB, Missouri

Congratulations! You're pregnant! Odds are, if this title has caught your attention, you're probably an expectant mother. If you're not, then I apologize for calling you pregnant, but let's assume for a moment you are in fact, pregnant. As an expectant mother, you've got that "glow" about you, and it is undoubtedly accompanied by a beautiful smile on your face. Or, like many expectant mothers, you are experiencing that glorious trial we call "morning sickness." I'll spare you the details of how that works, as just talking about it may bring up memories you'd rather forget. But, if you've experienced it or are currently experiencing it, you know your tummy isn't happy; and often it will reject perfectly good food. With rejection comes a mouthful of unpleasantness – very acidic unpleasantness. Let's discuss this in greater detail.

Have you ever heard a mother say something along the lines of "pregnancy ruined my teeth," or "when I was pregnant, my child sucked all the calcium from my teeth and now I have a bunch of cavities?" The truth of the matter is it has nothing to do with your unborn bundle of joy, but rather with the morning sickness you experienced during your pregnancy. Here's how it works: you eat a delicious plate of pasta and red sauce. After consuming the pasta, you quickly realize you and your little baby do not like it – at all. After telling your toilet all about this newly discovered fact, you wonder how to clean out the mess now coating your mouth. You decide to do the logical thing – brush your teeth. Herein lies the issue. You see, this mess that chose to use your mouth as it's personal highway is extremely acidic (pH of about 2 for you chemistry whizzes out there). This acid has just bathed your teeth. Coincidentally, the little bugs in your mouth that cause cavities actually use acid to burrow their way into your pearly-whites. In other words, acid will "soften" the normally hard mineral layer (enamel) that protects your teeth. So, you now have "soft teeth," and in your haste to get the nastiness out of your mouth, you decide to aggressively brush your teeth. Guess what? That toothbrush, even the "soft-bristled" one your friendly neighborhood dentist recommended, will actually brush those protective minerals right off. So what you've inadvertently done is gave the acid-loving bacteria in your mouth a wonderful environment to play in, and by brushing your teeth you've effectively opened the proverbial door and invited them to make themselves at home.

So, what's the best way to handle this situation? I'm glad you asked! Step one: rinse all the yucky stuff out of your mouth with good, old-fashioned water. Water is great because it has no taste to it, and it has no nutrients for that pesky oral bacteria to feed on (yay!). It will readily dilute the acid in your mouth, and thereby immediately reduce the risk of softening that ever-important enamel. But, damage to your teeth has been done, just by the acid alone. How do you repair it? If you leave your teeth alone, it will usually take about 30 minutes for them to re-mineralize. I recommend doing an additional rinse with something that will assist this hardening process. Milk has a lot of calcium in it, and you may consider it as a rinse. That said, it can easily make an expectant mother nauseous again. If this is the case, then it is not a good choice for you. A great alternative is to find a mouth rinse with fluoride in it. Fluoride is a glorious element that greatly assists your teeth in the hardening process. Swish and spit with a fluoride mouth rinse, and you're doing yourself (and your teeth) a huge favor.

With so many things to consider as an expectant mother, thinking about your teeth is understandably low on your priority list. I hope these simple suggestions I have given will prove themselves to be of use. Small and simple changes in how you manage your teeth can make a tremendous difference in your oral health. If you have any questions about being pregnant and taking care of your teeth, and you are active-duty, please feel free to call the Whiteman Dental Clinic at 660-687-2201. We would be happy to answer your questions and discuss your concerns. If you are a dependent, your dentist has great information they can share with you as well. Enjoy your smile!

A GROWING TRADITION

Deployed Whiteman reservist nominated for Sijan Award

By Tech. Sgt. Emily F. Alley
442nd Fighter Wing

A few months ago, Maj. Chad Carlton was excited as he stood in the deployment line to catch his flight to Afghanistan. Carlton's wing commander, Col. Hubie Hegtvedt, shook hands with each reservist from the 442nd Fighter Wing as they departed, but he paused as he shook Carlton's hand.

"You look too happy to be in this line," Hegtvedt recalled saying to Carlton.

"Sir, deployments like this are the reason I joined the Air Force!" Carlton replied.

The Air Force Reserve recognized Carlton's outstanding leadership and has nominated him to compete for the 2014 Sijan Award. He now moves up for consideration to receive the Air Force-level award.

Carlton, a pilot and weapons officer with the 303rd Fighter Squadron, is currently deployed to Afghanistan and is tasked with improving close air support tactics. He works to overcome challenges unique to the location. For example, the missions often involve Afghans who do not speak fluent English and face a language barrier.

"We are constantly striving to improve close air support while simultaneously keeping Afghan civilians and their surroundings safe," said Carlton.

His first job pairs an analysis of technical data with the nuanced understanding of the role of a fighter pilot in order to clearly articulate and solve tactical puzzles. His second job is to communicate those solutions.

Carlton's goal is to "better the learning of the squadron and foster open-minded thinkers," he said. "Always instruct through expert execution and honestly address your mistakes."

So far, he has been tremendously successful.

"The Sijan Award is an affirmation of leadership ability," said Hegtvedt. "It's always a pleasure to be able to recognize one of the many talented Airmen from the 442nd Fighter Wing."

The award recognizes Airmen each year who have demonstrated leadership in their personal and professional lives. It is named for the first Air Force Academy graduate, Capt. Lance Sijan, who received the Medal of Honor. Sijan was a pilot who was shot down in Vietnam, evaded capture for 45 days despite several injuries, and died as a prisoner of war.

"The whole reason we train is to be ready to deploy and to be tested in combat," said Carlton. "I am thankful to have the opportunity to be the squadron's weapons officer during a combat deployment."

REPORTING SEXUAL ASSAULT

HOTLINE
(24/7)
687-SARC (7272)

Ann Beem, SARC

Amy Creighton, Victim Advocate

THREE TYPES OF SEXUAL ASSAULT REPORTS

1. RESTRICTED:
Kept confidential if made to the SARC, medical personnel or chaplain (who then notifies the SARC). Victim can seek care for themselves without triggering the start of an investigation.

2. UNRESTRICTED:
If reported to security forces, first sergeant, commander or anyone in chain of command an investigation will start.

3. INDEPENDENT:
Victim may lose restricted reporting option if they tell someone or a bystander reports to OSI, security forces or chain of command.

How to report:

1. Call the hotline at 687-SARC (7272) to report a sexual assault, get information, get help getting a forensic exam and/or request a Victim Advocate. You can ask for help anonymously if you choose.

2. If your assault happened in the previous 96 hours or less you might want to consider getting a Sexual Assault Forensic Exam (whether you choose Restricted or Unrestricted reporting) to preserve any evidence. Evidence can be stored if you choose not to involve law enforcement immediately.

If getting an exam it is recommended that you do not change clothes, or if you do collect clothing you were wearing at the time of the incident and bring to the exam with you.

- Do not eat or drink anything
- Do not shower, brush your teeth or use mouth-wash
- Do not take or apply any type of medication to any injuries
- Do not use the bathroom, but if you must, bring urine for testing in a plastic or glass container
- Do not disturb or clean up the crime scene

WE ARE HERE TO HELP YOU EVERY STEP OF THE WAY

FCC NEWS AND INFORMATION

FCC OFFICE 660-687-5590

Want a Profitable Home Based Career?

Providers are needed to provide care for the following: evenings, weekends, swing shift workers, infants, special needs and mildly-ill children. The Air Force offers a subsidy for providers for all children under the ages of 3 and any child who falls into the critical needs areas. Providers who hold a license are subsidized $160 a week per qualifying child. Providers with chronic health problems are accepted. Call for more details.

Extended Duty Care

Register now for the extended duty care program. It is available to help DoD parents meet child care requirements for extra duty during exercises and emergencies. Care is provided in a contracted, licensed family child care home to augment regular care arrangements and is FREE. Come to the FCC office for an application prior to participation. Reservations need to be made at least a week prior to the care date. Call for more details.

509th AMXS crew receives Crew of the Month Award

U.S. Air Force Senior Airman Beau Haynes, left, Staff Sgt. Devon Goy, center, and Senior Airman Jonathan Googe, all 509th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron crew chiefs, receive the Crew of the Month Award at Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo., Sept. 19, 2014. The crew was measured in areas regarding dress and appearance, individual recognition, quality assurance performance, ancillary training and form inspections. Senior Airman Dustin Childs, 509th AMXS crew chief, also received this award but is not pictured.
