442nd FW ready for battle

Staff Sgt. Kent Kagarise

442nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Indication of battle ready training was evident at Whiteman Air Force Base during the 442nd Fighter Wing's July operational readiness inspection.

Crews from around the wing worked diligently to save moulage victims, load bombs onto aircraft and maintain situational awareness and readiness at all times.

While medical personnel treated victims with missing limbs and wounded by shrapnel, weapons loader crews combined passion and skill to load bombs onto the A-10 Thunderbolt II.

Tech. Sgt. Butch Portell, 442nd Maintenance Squadron weapons loader painted a picture of when his crew had to work one-man-short due to simulation input from an inspector and how the crew functioned while in full mission oriented protective posture.

"They sent us another guy who we weren't familiar with to help out since we were down a man," Sergeant Portell said. "He didn't know our body language, which made it difficult because when your team knows each other it's possible to communicate in MOPP 4 without talking."

weapons loader crew chief, is an Airman with ample time under the aircraft and works as a leader to guide his crew.

"Time is our greatest obstacle," Sergeant Jensen said. "At a lot of jobs you can back track if you've made a mistake — here we only have so much time to load and check weapons systems in order to turn jets."

Time is not the only obstacle these weapons loaders face.

"No doubt about it, this can be a dangerous job," said Tech. Sergeant Hafkey, weapons loader. "We can lose fingers really easily if we aren't careful. If we don't do our job right, bombs may not detonate when they are supposed to, or maybe not at all."

Team Whiteman ready for Global Strike Challenge

Airman 1st Class Torey Griffith

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

A total force team from the 509th and 131st Munitions Squadron were put to the test during a practice competition Monday in preparation for the first Global Strike Challenge later this month.

B-2 Spirit, B-52 Stratofortress, B-1 Lancer, and Intercontinental Ballistic Missile units are competing in the first Global Strike Challenge, showcasing the capabilities of the bomber, missile and security forces Airmen entrusted with the most powerful weapons on the earth.

"Global Strike Challenge will help us build pride and a culture of excellence," said Lt. Gen. Frank G. Klotz, the Air Force Global Strike Command commander.

It is "the beginning of a new tradition-- the best of the past launching us into the future," he said.

The challenge is a re-vamping of two separate competitions called "bomb comp," and "missile comp," where teams from various bases with various missions display the nation's ability to deploy and destroy.

As many as 400 Airmen are sharpening their skills while competing; including Airmen from Global Strike Command, Air Combat Command and the Air Reserve Component.

"As our premier crews train with great intensity for this competition, they are at the same time becoming unrivaled technical and weapons systems experts in their given disciplines," the general said. "The knowledge that each Airman gains while preparing for Global Strike Challenge will raise the bar at his or

Listen then speak, follow and then lead

Col. Gregory Champagne
131st Bomb Wing commander

In the military we have a culture of supporting our leaders; all is well when we know our leaders have our backs. From our most senior leaders to our unit leaders, we put our trust in them. Leaders inspire and motivate us to do our best. During the course of our careers, we have admired someone who portrayed a quality of leadership that we would follow. One thing is clear: a leader influences the direction of a unit.

Four months ago when I became the 131st Bomb Wing Commander, I set four strategic goals for the wing over the next few years. These goals included keeping a strong commitment to total force integration with the 509th Bomb Wing, becoming experts in the B-2 mission, establishing an operating location in St. Louis, and having the 131st Bomb Wing represented through higher headquarters, state, and federal levels to tell the story of the Missouri Air National Guard.

With our move from Lambert Field to Whiteman, the 131st has gone through a leadership challenge in the last three years culminating with the majority of our leadership new to their positions. This provides the unique capability to shift the direction of our wing. We will not dwell in the past, but focus on now, and the future.

The now: we, the 131st, fly and support the B-2 mission at Whiteman AFB. Whiteman is the home of the 131st; we are part of Team Whiteman.

The future: change. Future budget cuts will create change and I have been working with our senior 131st leadership to lead turn these reductions to ensure that our "missions" are funded. There will be changes in the way we do business; precedence will not dictate how future decisions are made. I will need your help as we go down this road while serving the people of this state and nation. Not only the 131st, but the U.S. military as a whole is in a flux of change which demands ever greater leadership.

Leadership is not just a commander's or chief's role, but a role that all officers and NCOs must assume because of the responsibility these positions demand. From our first day in the military, leadership and the role it plays in the organization is discussed. The Airman's Creed, "...I am an American Airman, Wingman, Leader, Warrior," the NCO Creed, "...and lead the way with the highest level of competence," and the Chief's Creed, which reflects the very core aspects of leadership, "character...honesty...stand(ing) for the truth," all reflect leadership.

In my recent commanders calls I gave guidance to my Officers, Chiefs and NCOs: "I empower you to make decisions, I support you in these decisions, and I hold you accountable for your decisions"... and they would not have it any other way.

As we focus on today's mission I ask our current leaders to look at the future. Who are the next leaders and what are you doing to mentor them? We have a great junior officer and enlisted force that want to lead and look for their leaders to mentor them.

Future leaders – Learn from both good and bad leadership examples; ensure you will not make the same mistakes when you are in a leadership position. When opportunities present themselves grab onto them and lead.

Leadership comes from hard work and support from your airmen. Most want to take direction from leaders, most want to be here and be part of the team. Treat airman as you would want to be treated, ask airmen their opinion, and always have time to visit airmen. Be ready to accept criticism, never accept the phrase, "that's the way it has always been." Don't be afraid to change something, always be professional, and never think you are above anyone. Self serving decisions will always be noticed. Don't leave until your people leave, do as you say, be predictable. Set the example, keep people informed, and take responsibility for your actions. In short, always have your airman's back.

A.C.E: There is help, there is hope, there is an answer

Chaplain (Maj.) Jonathan Wade
332nd Air Expeditionary Wing

JOINT BASE BALAD, Iraq (AFNS)
– I'll call him "Rick."

In the words of his military friends and co-workers, Rick was one of the greatest guys you'd ever want to meet: A hard working NCO in a high operations tempo unit, a family man, a compassionate friend always seeking opportunities to help others in his unit succeed.

Rick was humble, they said. He would never take credit for his talents, instead calling it a "team effort."

His supervisors noticed, at times, that Rick was unusually hard on himself and seemed depressed about his job abilities, despite the opinion to the contrary of the entire supervisory chain. Then, quite suddenly, Rick's attitude perked up. He seemed to enjoy his job. Gone were the self-criticisms that had plagued him in the past. His friends noticed, and remarked about the positive change.

Within a week or two, Rick requested leave so he could take his family on a dream vacation. Word was that it was the best vacation he and his family had ever enjoyed together.

Upon his return from leave, Rick quietly slipped out of his home and into his office in the pre-dawn hours, telling his wife there was unfinished business he had to complete. She thought nothing of it, as Rick often gave up his free time for work needs. Rick carefully stacked project binders and folders on his desk with notes to co-workers of what was unfinished and how to complete each project. Then Rick drove out to a remote part of the base, put a gun to his head and ended his life.

It's been many years since I cared for Rick's devastated wife, his grieving children, and his friends and co-workers. Despite the time, I have never forgotten Rick or the serious damage that suicide leaves in its wake.

Suicide is about more than just an abrupt, untimely end to a human life. It is about unanswered questions, unfulfilled dreams, possibilities that will never be, a struggle for closure that may never come.

As one child (now an adult) said of his mother's suicide, "For years, I thought that one of the reasons she killed herself was because she couldn't get us to brush our teeth or other things we were supposed to do."

He'll never really know the answer, and will struggle to find one, just as Rick's circle of relationships struggles to this day to understand.

Is there good news? Absolutely. Rick's death taught me early in my career that there is a simple but powerful tool to prevent suicide from taking another life and leaving behind its human wreckage. That tool is you!

As servicemembers, we would fight to the death to save our wingman from death at the hands of the enemy. When we fight, we fight for each other. Whether the firefight is with an external foe or an internal battle against an emotionally crushing problem, we are the instrument of help that can rescue our friend and all those who love and care for him or her. How? By simply remembering and implementing the ACE plan.

A – Ask your friend how he is doing. Most people will typically respond "okay," because we use the "how ya doin'?" question as a common greeting. Take the time to ask him how he is really doing.

Sometimes all a person needs is someone to listen to them. So, talk less, listen more and let your friend share his story with you.

If you suspect he may be self-destructive, ask him directly if he is thinking of killing himself. Is that uncomfortable? Yes, but it can be the most important question you ever ask. Get over the discomfort and ask him.

What if the answer to the question is "yes?"

C – Care for your friend. Don't leave him alone. Calmly control the situation by continuing to listen without judging him. Your job now is to care for your friend until you can get him to competent emergency care. Let him know that there is help available to navigate him through his troubles to a place of hope and peace.

E – Escort your friend to the emergency room. His emotional wound is as life-threatening as a shrapnel wound to the heart. Don't leave your friend alone until you find the expertise to help him. He may give you many reasons he doesn't want to seek help, and you will have to be persistent and truthful. He may ask about how this affects his career and family. You can't tell him what you don't know. Let the experts handle that. What he needs now is someone to help him.

Remember, you are the best tool for helping a suicidal friend or co-worker. Remember ACE. There is help, there is hope, and there is an answer.

Sijan award winners announced

Heidi Hunt

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

The 509th Bomb Wing commander, Brig. Gen. Robert Wheeler presented four Airmen with the 2010 Lance P. Sijan United States Air Force Leadership Award July 7.

This award recognizes the accomplishments of officers and enlisted members who have demonstrated the highest quality of leadership in the performance of their duties and their personal lives.

Winner recipients were Maj. Jason Horton, 509th Operations Support Squadron; Capt. Wilburn Poe, 509th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron; Senior Master Sgt. Richard Stiles, 509th Force Support Squadron; and Staff Sgt. Morgan Quijano, 509th Medical Support Squadron.

"These Airmen have displayed outstanding leadership abilities and their accomplishments speak volumes and really help set the Air Force standard," said General Wheeler.

The senior officer category winner, Maj. Jason Horton, 509th OSS distinguished himself as Assistant Director of Operations and Wing Weapons Officer. Major Horton expertly led three flights consisting of highly-skilled B-2 planners, operators and intelligence personnel in the nation's only B-2 Bomber wing solidifying the combat capability of 80 plus aviators. He directed the world's most lethal Mission Planning Cell ensuring that the required tactics and plans are ready and to support combatant commanders at a moment's notice. Major Horton's leadership was critical in the re-building of the nuclear bomber deterrence force.

The junior officer category winner, Capt. Wilburn Poe, 509th AMXS unit officer in charge; leading 510 aircraft maintenance technicians and senior non-commissioned officers from 11 different Air Force Specialty Codes. He was also responsible for the maintenance of 20 B-2 aircraft worth $44 billion. Captain Poe's direction of 34 thousand maintenance actions generated 1,040 sorties totaling 4,864 flight hours which ensured 110 pilots were combat mission ready. Additionally, his aggressive management style guaranteed the successful generation of nine aircraft during an extremely demanding Nuclear Operational Readiness Inspection which garnered the wing an overall "excellent" rating ultimately showcasing the wing's ability to provide deterrence and combat capability for the nation.

There's a fungus among us

Airman 1st Class Torey Griffith

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

High humidity and an abundance of rain aren't at the top of many Missouri residents' list of things that make life grand, but if you happen to be a mold spore, this summer's weather is cause to rejoice.

Mold thrives where there is oxygen, moisture and organic material to feed on. Its purpose on Earth is to to breakdown decaying material, but certain species of mold can be dangerous.

"If we went sampling for mold, we'd find it everywhere," Maj. Francisco Catala, The 509th Medical Support Squadron Bioenvironmental Engineering Flight commander, said. "It's evidence that we live on planet Earth. As far as how dangerous mold is largely depends on if a person has a certain allergy to the type of mold he or she is exposed to."

Major Catala said there are no occupational or environmental standards for mold.

"We follow Air Force policy that basically states if someone is feeling sick due to something such as mold, the person needs to go to a healthcare provider so they can conduct the proper exams to tell us what is causing that person's problems," the major said.

Regular cleaning, quick removal of moisture, and care of HVAC equipment will prevent mold growth.

"It is the responsibility of every facility occupant to clean the diffusers (HVAC vents). When dust accumulates on the vents, it could collect moisture and potentially produce mold," said Mr. Dan Lemoine, 509th CES deputy chief of operations.

Malfunctioning equipment, leaky pipes and faulty building seals could allow an over-abundance of moisture, providing conditions for mold to exist.

"If people are having problems with their air conditioning systems, they need to contact CE customer service, so we can come out and look at the system and give them recommendations on what repairs are needed," said Mr. Lemoine.

Mold cleanup is easier than one might think. A solution of detergent and water and a sponge or brush will take care of the problem, and the bioenvironmental office recommends wearing equipment such as gloves and goggles while cleaning.

"Bottom line ... moisture control and good housekeeping are the keys for mold

Flying blind is not an option. Combat missions are crucial to supporting overseas contingencies, allowing for no errors by everyone involved.

To execute these missions effectively, Airmen like Master Sgt. Lowell Morris, a 509th Operations Support Squadron combat airspace management technician, are needed.

Sergeant Morris recently returned from a seven-month deployment from an undisclosed location in Southwest Asia. His job was to ensure there were no civilian aircraft flying in coalition forces' airspace. Sergeant Morris said that on a day-to-day basis, his unit built and executed an air control order, which is the delegation of airspace inside the theater.

"Any time the Army, Navy, Air Force or Marines wanted to fly or shoot any type of large weaponry, there had to be airspace approved for that action," Sergeant Morris said. "They would make the request for the airspace, and we would make sure it was available and de-conflict from other airspaces."

Sergeant Morris and his team coordinated with air traffic control facilities all over the region.

"We were responsible for Operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom and Combined Joint Task Force Horn of Africa," he said.

Sergeant Morris' duty while deployed differed in the sense that instead of communicating with the aircraft directly like he does here, he communicated with air traffic controllers.

"My deployed job was completely different from anything I've ever done," Sergeant Morris said. "I was working on a larger scale. We were able to see how all the pieces fit together to form a well-oiled machine. Here, we tend to stick to what we know and don't branch out. We know the mission is getting done, but we really don't see anything outside of our comfort zone."

Instead of watching small targets on a screen, Sergeant Morris was able to witness the coalition's progress.

"It was great to see my day-to-day actions actually making a difference," Sergeant Morris said. "What we would design or implement one week, we would see on CNN a few weeks later."

In addition, Sergeant Morris also had the opportunity to be a first sergeant which allowed him to help Airmen with personal or work-related problems.

"It was nice to be able to help people with issues and see them get resolved quickly, especially since they were far from home," he said.

Sergeant Morris said one of his most memorable accomplishments was being able to help a few Airmen get home on emergency leave.

"Knowing they would get home in a timely manner to be with their families was very rewarding, said Sergeant Morris.

Whether Sergeant Morris was executing air control orders or taking care of his Airmen, he played a crucial role in ensuring mission success.

Winners

The senior non commissioned officer category winner, Senior Master Sgt. Richard Stiles, 509th FSS Sustainment Services Flight superintendent, guided a 151-member flight that hosted 524 thousand visitors, and garnered 3.8 million in revenue, while maintaining a 98 percent customer satisfaction rate. This directly contributed to him being named as the 509th Mission Support Group senior non-commissioned officer of the year. Furthermore, while deployed to Baghdad, Iraq he had a pivotal role on a joint drawdown plan with the Army that drove an on-time implementation of a $2.5 million morale, welfare and recreation contract.

The junior enlisted category winner is Staff Sgt. Morgan Quijano, 509th Medical Support Squadron unit deployment manager, provided information of the units personnel and ensured assets' mission preparedness. Lastly, coordinated, scheduled and tracked training of more than 180 assigned medical group members ensuring maintenance of all deployment mobility records. Sergeant Quijano's career has included has physical training leader, outpatient records technician, alternate same day surgery unit ward clerk, unit security manager, AEF UTC reporting tool and status of resources and training.

Winners were rated on their scope of responsibility, professional leadership, and leadership image and community involvement.

The recipients were award at wing level and will compete at 8th Air Force level.

The Lance P. Sijan award was first presented in 1981. It is named in honor of the first U.S. Air Force Academy graduate to receive the Medal of Honor. Captain Sijan was shot down over Vietnam Nov. 9, 1967, and evaded capture for 45 days despite severe injuries. He later died while in a North Vietnamese prisoner-of-war camp. He posthumously received the Medal of Honor for his heroism.

symposium, the security forces portion of the competition and official score-posting ceremonies.

The 509th and 131st Munitions Squadron Airmen geared up to compete, Monday, running through a practice contest.

"This competition allows an opportunity for the Air National Guard and active-duty Airmen to collaborate on a common goal, and allows us to demonstrate how well we all do our jobs," said Tech. Sgt. David Mendenhall, 509th Munitions Squadron assistant NCO in charge of conventional maintenance. "We are all proud of the level of excellence we have achieved prior to, and during this competition."

Sergeant Mendenhall and the MUNS team have their eyes on excellence, and understand the importance of the stewardship of the weapons the President and Combatant Commanders afford them.

"During my 14 years at Whiteman, I have witnessed a team that does well in everything they attempt to accomplish," said the sergeant. "I expect this wing will continue this trend, and dominate in this competition."

The 509th and the AFRC 131st Bomb Wings are competing against the 2nd Bomb Wing and the AFRC 917th Wing at Barksdale AFB, the 7th Bomb Wing at Dyess AFB, Texas, and the 28th Bomb Wing at Ellsworth AFB, S.D.

AFRC's 917th Wing at Barksdale AFB and the Missouri Air National Guard's 131st Bomb Wing are also participating in the bomb competition.

The missile competition, starting at the end of August, will involve the 90th Missile Wing at F.E. Warren AFB, Wyo., the 91st Missile Wing at Minot AFB and the 341st Missile Wing at Malmstrom AFB, Mont.

The security forces competition is scheduled to begin Nov. 13 at Barksdale AFB.

Official score-posting will be at Barksdale AFB Nov. 15 through 18, in conjunction with the Global Strike Challenge technology symposium.

Applying for Air Force NAF jobs going virtual

Submitted by 509 FSS Human Resources Office

The 509th Force Support Squadron Human Resources Office began accepting online applications for non-appropriated fund jobs July 12. Effective July 17, paper applications will no longer be accepted.

This new centralized online tool is making it easier for job seekers to find and apply for federal careers in various nonappropriated fund activities, including Air Force clubs, golf courses, child development centers, youth centers, bowling centers and outdoor recreation centers. Within the last two months, www.nafjobs.org transitioned to an Air Force-wide job board that lists vacancies for all Air Force NAF facilities.

To apply for a job, applicants log on to www.nafjobs.org and create a free profile that includes work background, any military experience and education. They may also upload a resume and other supporting documentation.

Once an individual identifies a vacancy for which he/she would like to apply, clicking the "apply" button submits the online application to the servicing NAF human resources office. The applicant can check the status of his/her application under the "My Applications" tab in "My Profile."

Unlike other job application programs, the NAF system sends every application to the hiring manager for consideration.

Nearly 180,000 federal civilian employees are paid out of the federal appropriated fund budget, while 25,000 Air Force NAF employees are paid by money that is generated by NAF activities, which provide a community environment for Air Force families to live, work and play.

Based on the employment category, NAF personnel may qualify for benefits similar to those of other federal civilians, including health and life insurance, retirement plans, annual leave and sick leave.

If you have any questions about the new www.nafjobs.org application process, call 660-687-6476.

Civilian Upgrade Awards Online

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFNS) – Civilian employees at Whiteman can now update their non-monetary awards through the self-service module in the Defense Civilian Personnel Data System using the "Awards and Bonuses" tab in "My Biz."

The ability to update non-monetary awards, such as length of service recognition, exemplary civilian service award and Air Force Civilian Achievement Award, eliminates the need to fax, e-mail or deliver an approved award certificate or other award documentation to the local civilian personnel section or training office.

"Employees get better control of their own destiny and their own career, said Ms. Donna Dempsey, 509th Force Support Squadron Civilian Personnel Office chief. "It also improves accuracy in employee's records."

Monetary awards, such as notable achievement, special act or service, and time-off awards, must still be updated by the local civilian personnel section.

"It's great because employees are able to put in awards that weren't previously updated in their record," Ms.

Dempsey said.

Although supervisors can view and print the awards entered by the employee, they cannot update their employees' information.

This timely and customer-focused initiative is similar to the self-service education update initiative launched in August 2008 and the training update initiative launched in September 2009.

While this additional self-service capability allows employees direct access to update awards, officials strongly encourage users to review their inputs for accuracy before submitting them. Knowingly entering false or misleading information is punishable by disciplinary action, monetary fines or both.

"Employee's are taking more and more control over their careers as we do away with manpower and reduce our numbers," Ms. Dempsey noted.

For more information on the automation of civilian records, call the Total Force Service Center at (800) 525-0102.

“CHUTING” FOR SAFETY

Airman Cody H. Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

It's a sunny Tuesday afternoon when you receive an unexpected call. The man on the line informs you an F-16 containing the parachute you personally packed, just went down. Do you trust your work? Are you in fear for the Airman's lives?

Master Sgt. Timothy Mertes, 509th Operations Support Squadron superintendent of aircrew flight equipment, said he still remembers the call when his parachutes were put to the test.

"Two Airman were flying out of my base, using my equipment, when the F-16 went down," he said. "Both parachutes were under my name, both worked, and both Airman walked away unharmed."

Those were the first two lives his equipment saved, but in his career field, saving lives is what's expected.

Approximately 30 Airman of the 509th OSS AFE maintain safety equipment for 39th Bomb Wing aircraft and run inspections year-round to ensure they stay safe. These Airman operate out of four shops; two are B-2 bomber dedicated shops, one is a T-38 trainer shop and the final shop, or "main" shop, supports all equipment repairs of the flying squadrons, to include packing of parachutes, survival kit and life-preserver units.

"We conduct inspections on all the gear the pilots wear or use during flight and ejection," Sergeant Mertes said.

The in-flight gear these Airman are responsible for include a helmet for communication, a mask for air and a harness to connect to the parachute. Other items include the parachutes, survival kit and ejection seat as a whole.

Quality assurance sheets are used to assist unit members with preparing the equipment and to instruct trainees on the step-by-step process. Once the trainees finish the job, a supervisor conducts a quality assurance check to ensure the job was completed to perfection.

The parachutes and survival kits involve more detailed work, which in turn includes more inspection criteria. In-process inspections, or checks throughout the packing process, are required for these critical items.

"The parachute has a lot of folding involved and the survival kits must contain specific survival-essential items, so the manuals for these items have stopping points throughout the process," said Tech. Sgt. Clinton Dalton, 509th Operations Group NCO in-charge of quality assurance. "The trainee can't proceed to the following steps until his work is reviewed by a supervisor."

Sergeant Dalton said this maintains necessary high standards. "The in-process inspection enforces their core competencies and work ethics while ensuring they know how to do their job."

Personal evaluations are given on a recurring basis to test the trainee's on their job knowledge and skill while continuous training keeps all equipment up-to-date.

"I notify each respected NCOIC, an Airman of my choosing and what equipment I designate to be inspected each month," said Sergeant Dalton. "I make sure they are following the step-by-step procedures, ask them technical questions to measure their job knowledge and time them on their performance based on the type of equipment."

Sergeant Dalton said that over time items are going to have problems, whether minor or major, and the QA and IPJ inspections are there to prevent pilots from flying with any non-safe equipment.

"That's our retention to the equipment," he said. "If a pilot returns with no problems then we're doing our job right. You never want a crew member to punch-out, but with our full-sure procedures we ensure their safety in case they do. It's a good feeling when the pilot has a flight complication and returns unharmed thanks to our system."

Whiteman Spirit Award

By Heidi Hunt

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

The 509th Bomb Wing commander, Brig. Gen. Robert Wheeler, presented Mr. Alex Slocum, 509th BW Information Protection, with the Whiteman Spirit Award July 12.

Mr. Slocum was nominated for the award by Mrs. Jan Smith from the Missouri State Veterans Home director of volunteer services, for demonstrating outstanding service as the historian for the Matthews-Crawford American Legion, Post 131 and Missouri American Legion Sixth District. According to Mrs. Smith, Mr. Slocum was instrumental in helping organize special events involving those organizations.

"Along with organizing events at both locations for Memorial Day and Veterans Day, Mr. Slocum is a tremendous help to me in planning the community program held on these two special days at the Missouri Veterans Home in Warrensburg," said Mrs. Smith.

In addition to volunteering at the Missouri Veterans Home, Mr. Slocum recruits guest speakers and other event participants such as the Whiteman Air Force Base honor guard, and coordinates membership meetings for the American Legion at the Veterans Home as well as writes press releases for upcoming events and programs hosted by the home.

"He is just 'super' to work with," Mrs. Smith said. "Mr. Slocum is a great team player is willing to step up and assist with whatever is needed with a positive attitude. He is dedicated to enriching the lives of the 200 veterans living at the Warrensburg Veterans Home."

When he's not volunteering in the local community, Mr. Slocum's performance as an information protection specialist is also exemplary, according to Mrs. Cheri LeBlanc, 509th BW chief of information protection.

"Mr. Slocum monitors more than 10,000 clearances for personnel throughout a dynamic total-force environment maintaining a 99.5 percent error-free submission rate," said Mrs. LeBlanc. "We submit around 750 cases per year. The work is tedious and requires a detailed review of every submission."

"Overall, Mr. Slocum deserves this award and is a pleasure to work with," Mrs. Smith added.

Mr. Slocum was honored this month at the American Legion Department of Missouri convention as the "Post History Yearbook" award recipient for the third year in a row and will now compete for the National Award in October 2010. Mr. Slocum's previous submissions have earned a first and second place awards at the National level in the Yearbook competition the last two years. This award recognizes his creative efforts tracking every event and activity that the American Legion Post 131, is involved with and creates an historical depiction.

control," Major Catala said.

Mold prevention tips for facility managers

1. Report leaky plumbing and leaks in the building envelope. Wet or damp spots should be cleaned and dried within 48 hours.

2. Conduct building survey following rain events to document condensation and wet spots. Request a work order to repair moisture problems.

3. If condensation on windows and walls are a common occurrence, contact CE for preventative actions.

4. Keep heating, ventilation, and air conditioning (HVAC) drip pans clean, flowing properly, and unobstructed.

5. Perform regular building/HVAC inspections. Coordinate HVAC inspections with CE, as needed, to ensure maintenance is scheduled and performed.

Editor's Note: The mold prevention tips referenced in this article, can be found in Environmental Protection Agency document 402-K-01-001—Mold Remediation in Schools and Commercial Buildings (March 2001).

Runnin' for the fun of it

509th Civil Engineer Squadron explosive ordnance members run the monthly wing 5k run in tactical armor July 9. The wing-wide run promotes the Air Force's "fit to fight" concept, as well as raising esprit de corps. The top three runners for males were Brian Frank, Eric Birdsong and Rich Reed; and for females were Shelby Lile, Amanda Patton and Jennifer Gloria.

This Week at the Movies

Friday
July 16, 2010 - 7 p.m.

Killers

Ashton Kutcher, Katherine Heigl

While on a trip with her parents Jen meets the man of her dreams, the dashing, handsome Spencer Aimes. Three years later, her seemingly impossible wish to marry has come true: the newlyweds live the ideal suburban life - that is until the morning after Spencer's 30th Birthday when bullets start flying, literally. It turns out Spencer never bothered to tell Jen he's also an international super-spy, and now her perfect world has been turned upside down. Faced with the fact that her husband is a hit man, Jen is determined to discover what other secrets Spencer might be keeping. All the while trying to dodge bullets, keep up neighborly appearances, manage the in laws and work out some major trust issues. PG-13 - violent action, sexual material and language 140 min

Saturday
July 17, 2010 - 7 p.m.

Splice

Adrien Brody, Sarah Polley

Genetic engineers Clive and Elsa specialize in splicing together DNA from different animals to create incredible new hybrids. Now they want to use human DNA in a hybrid that could revolutionize science and medicine. But when the pharmaceutical company that funds their research forbids it, Clive and Elsa secretly conduct their own experiments. The result is Dren, an amazing, strangely beautiful creature that exhibits uncommon intelligence and an array of unexpected physical developments. And though, at first, Dren exceeds their wildest dreams, she begins to grow and learn at an accelerate rate and threatens to become their worst nightmare. ### FREE Classified Advertising in the Whiteman Warrior

READ ALL RULES BEFORE PLACING AN AD

1. Advertising is free to all active-duty, guard and reserve military members and civil servants who work on base or at the MoARNG in Warrensburg only. Military or civil service rank must be included in the space for "rank." We do offer free advertising to retired military members.
2. Ads of a commercial nature such as baby-sitting, lawn maintenance, house cleaning, product sales, apartments or houses for rent, work-at-home opportunities or any other service in which the person makes a profit must be prepaid. Paid ads must be placed directly through the Sedalia Democrat at 1-800-892-7856, dropped off at 700 S. Massachusetts Ave., Sedalia, Mo., 65301 or e-mailed to theclassifieds@sedaliademocrat.com. They accept VISA, MasterCard, cash, personal check or money order.
3. Free ads are for one-time sale of personal items only. Free ads can't be placed for churches, groups, clubs, organizations or friends not affiliated with the military. Each item must be sold for $150 or less.
4. Only one free ad*, maximum 30 words, will be allowed to run at any given time by the same household, for a maximum of eight weeks. Ads over the 30-word maximum will be edited at the publisher's discretion. *People who are PCSing may place more than one ad and sell the items at any price.

5. Include your home phone in the ad so people can contact you. USE OF DUTY PHONES IN ADS IS AGAINST AIR FORCE REGULATIONS.

6. Print legibly, and place punctuation and spaces where necessary. Use only one word per line.

7. Free ads aren't taken over the phone. They must be dropped off at or mailed to the 509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs Office, 1081 Arnold Ave Blvd, Bldg 59, Whiteman AFB, Mo., 65305. Ads may also be faxed to 660-687-7948.

8. Many offices on base are using old forms**. If you would like a copy of the new ad form to keep in your office, call 687-6123 and we'll fax a new form for your use. Or, you can download it at <http://www.whiteman.af.mil/news/index.shtml> and click on "Whiteman Warrior Classified Ad Form."

9. Homes for sale that are listed with a realtor must be paid for. Only people who are PCSing and selling homes FSBO (for sale by owner) qualify as a free ad.

10. Free yard sale ads are for active-duty, guard, reserve and retired military members living on or off base. People who live on base must have their yard sale approved by the housing office first.

11. The deadline for placing new ads, canceling or making changes to ads is 10 a.m. Friday, one week before desired publication.

12. Ads that don't meet these guidelines will not run. Free advertising is a privilege extended to you by the publisher, and your cooperation is greatly appreciated. Submissions do not guarantee publication. Publication is on a space available basis.
