MARE prepares Whiteman emergency response teams

By Airman 1st Class Cody H. Ramirez 509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Emergency response personnel assigned to Whiteman Air Force Base and from the surrounding communities conducted a Major Accident Response Exercise here, Tuesday, in preparation for the Wings Over Whiteman Air Show scheduled for Sept. 18 and 19.

"The exercise brought together key personnel from on and off-base, from initial responders to wing leadership," said Lt. Col. Michael Wittrock, 509th Bomb Wing Chief of Wing Plans and Programs, and air show director. "Exercises help build relationships and procedures between off-base agencies that work with us to identify and fix issues prior to an air show, and mitigate real-world accidents, if they were to happen."

The MARE kicked off with a simulated F-16 Fighting Falcon crash during an air show demonstration at 10:30 a.m. Emergency responders arrived on scene in minutes to extinguish fires at the crash site and to analyze other threats such as hazardous spills and mock unexploded ordnance.

More than 150 Airmen from operations, maintenance and security forces units here fused into the 13th Bomb Squadron detachment to attend Red Flag-Alaska at Eielson Air Force Base, Aug. 5-20.

RF-A is a combat operations exercise that corresponds to the designed operational capability of participating units in order to increase chances of survival in combat.

"Red Flag-Alaska builds on the lessons learned from previous iterations as well as those derived from current world contingencies to provide participants the most realistic, challenging and educational air combat simulation possible anywhere in the world," said Brig. Gen. Jim Post, 354th Fighter Wing commander, who hosts RF-A out of Eielson.

"We trained with our allies to kick down the door and hold whatever our adversaries value most at risk, should deterrence ever fail," said Lt. Col. Mark Pye, 13th BS and detachment commander. "That's exactly what Red Flag-Alaska offered—the opportunity to integrate, train and sharpen our combat skills with and against the best in the world."

The exercise is organized into defensive, offensive and neutral forces. Defensive forces simulate counter-air tactics through ground-control intercept and surface-to-air systems. Offensive forces include U.S. and allied tactical and support units. Throughout the mock war, the neutral team plays middle-man between the two sides, ensuring safety and control standards are met.

"The challenges of using a different airfield provided our Airmen a new outlook on their expeditionary skills," said Lt. Col. Mark Riselli, 509th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron commander.

The exercise touches on a wide range of unit assets, such as intelligence, maintenance, and command and control personnel.

Colonel Pye said the primary focus of this exercise was integration. With this focus came the combination of conventional and low-observable aircraft, the union of active duty and guard, and a coalition of U.S. and foreign pilots.

"This gave us a unique opportunity to fight and train with multiple combat assets in a robust environment, with challenging ground and air based threats," said Colonel Pye. "At the end of the day, both sides [conventional combat and low-observable operations] bring very important capabilities to the fight. We have to train to understand these capabilities and successfully use them in combat."

Combat assets and aircraft weren't the only integration taking place at RF-A, the personnel were

More than 20 percent of Whiteman's members who deployed to RF-A were guard, according to Colonel Pye. Along with that, the commander of all deployed detachments was Col. Michael Francis, 131st Bomb Wing vice commander.

"This was the first total force integration at red flag for [Whiteman]," he said. "The Guard was integrated into different roles and functions throughout all levels of responsibility during the exercise."

Bringing in the coalition of U.S. and foreign forces, Lt. Adam "Curdy" Curd, Royal Air Force pilot, is currently flying the B-2 as a 13th BS pilot, an honor afforded to few.

"Lieutenant Curd brings a unique perspective to the B-2 program and coalition forces as a whole having served in combat in the Tornado," said Colonel Pye. "He is especially valuable at venues like Red Flag Alaska where the integration of coalition conventional (F-16) and low observable aircraft such as the B-2 and F-22 is an important objective. Coalition warriors like Curdy make us a more lethal and effective team."

8th Air Force commander delivers Labor Day safety message

This Labor Day weekend marks the end of the traditional "Critical Days of Summer" and the Mighty Eighth's own "180 Critical Days of Safety" campaigns. So far this year during the Critical Days of Summer, the Air Force has lost nine Airmen: six PMV mishaps, one motorcycle mishap, one sport and recreation mishap, and one miscellaneous mishap. Just one of these losses is one too many.

Prior to this Labor Day weekend, I charge commanders, directors, and supervisors to spend a few face-to-face moments emphasizing the importance of safety, proper personal risk management, and the wingman concept. Through a sustained and concerned effort of education and direct involvement—being a wingman—we can do our part to ensure our Airmen and their families return safely.

Personal, professional balance improves overall quality of life

By Lt. Col. Keith Higley

509th Medical Support Squadron commander

When I was a young man my father always spoke of keeping balance in my life. While the statement always sounded so profound, I usually did the head nod but really had no clue what he was talking about. The good news is I actually retained his words and thoughts, so later in life I could reflect back and realize that I had actually implemented his great advice. While balance comes in many forms and can get somewhat complicated, it's best to analyze your balance in three ways: first, your professional balance; second, your personal balance; and lastly, your overall-life balance.

Your professional balance really breaks down into three parts. Your job is the most important piece of the puzzle. You always need to do your job well and continue to strive to be the best at what you do. You also need to keep focused on your professional development, whether it is professional military education or civilian education. Finally, make sure you make time to be part of our Air Force and civilian communities, get involved with activities, whether it is volunteer work, athletics or community improvement initiatives.

Sounds simple, right? Well, it's actually not. There will be many times when you believe all you have time to do is your job. The balance comes by taking advantage of slower ops tempo periods and taking a class, finishing your professional military education, or helping on a volunteer project. Maybe this year you really don't have time to do anything but your job and studying for promotion, that's ok, but remember next year to get your professional balance back by doing something for your community or simply taking a college class. My only caution is to never forget the most important piece of professional balance, which is to do your job and do it well. Don't be the person who shifts away from your job to do other activities, so that your coworkers have to pick up the slack.

Next is personal balance. Personal balance includes family, fun and fitness. Family can mean many things to many people. It can mean your spouse, children, parents or friends. Make sure you make time for the important people in your life, it's a symbiotic relationship, they depend on you and you depend on them. There will be times when they make great sacrifices for your profession, make sure you make the most of that time and give back to those people. My father also told me to always make sure I leave some time for myself. You need to have fun in life, do the hobbies you enjoy. This becomes very important as you need to be able to recharge your own energy levels at times to be ready to tackle other challenges. Finally, fitness is something you can't forget. Make time to be both emotionally and physically fit. All the other pieces become easier to juggle if you're prepared, both in mind and body.

Lastly, to obtain overall life balance, you only need to create balance between your personal and professional lives. It's not always simple and there will be times when your professional balance is very consuming and you feel like you're not with your family enough and you're not having fun. This weekend is Labor Day weekend, for many of you this is a chance to work on your personal balance. I encourage you to do that. Have fun, spend time with family, work on your physical and mental fitness and remember to be safe. Balance in your life is very important, it makes you more productive, it will lead to a better quality of life and it's definitely a path to success.

Eliminate smokeless tobacco use: Team Whiteman urged to take the Challenge

By Joel A. Urdang

509th Medical Operations Squadron tobacco secession manager

Until recently there has been a slow decline in smoking rates throughout the country; this trend seems to be leveling off, according to www.af-chips.brooks.af.mil/main/main.aspx. On the other hand, the consumption of smokeless tobacco, often referred to dipping and chewing, is on the rise.

The website states the current overall Air Force smokeless tobacco use rate is 4.8 percent — higher than the U.S. national civilian average of 3.5 percent. At Whiteman it's a much different story. Whiteman has an eight percent smokeless tobacco use rate which lists the base as the third highest use Air Force Base and the highest in the Global Strike Command.

There are several reasons for the increase rates of smokeless tobacco use: The introduction of new smokeless tobacco products; increased marketing by smokeless tobacco companies; the overall ease of use including the limited impact on those around users (no second-hand smoke); and the rampant circulation of several smokeless tobacco-related myths.

One of the most misleading and potentially dangerous myths is that it is a harmless alternative to smoking. The site confirms that this is not true. All forms of tobacco use can lead to nicotine addiction and health-related problems. Nicotine is readily absorbed into the bloodstream when a tobacco product is "chewed." Upon entering the bloodstream it constricts the blood vessels, reducing the flow of oxygen. Nicotine quickly stimulates the adrenal glands to release the hormone epinephrine (adrenaline) which increases blood pressure, respiration and heart rate — a scenario that over time often negatively impacts a user's overall health and well being, including their sleep and stress levels.

Dipping and chewing tobacco can result in a variety of health related consequences including bad breath, stained teeth, receding gums, abrasions, bone loss around the roots of the teeth and loosened teeth which can eventually fall out. Between 50 and 75 percent of daily smokeless tobacco users have non-cancerous and precancerous oral lesions called leukoplakia. These lesions are white, leathery ridges in the tissues of the mouth. In many cases, they typically resolve in about six weeks after stopping smokeless tobacco use. The nitrosamines in these products are highly carcinogenic (cancer causing) and they are known to induce tumors of the lung, oral cavity, esophagus, pancreas and liver.

Because of this "harmless alternative" myth, we've seen several related consequences including: earlier initiation of smokeless tobacco use by youth, initiation of smokeless tobacco by young military recruits who believe that it is a safer way to use tobacco when compared to smoking; and the unique, unproven and rarely effective strategy of using dip or chew to cut down on smoking or in preparation for quitting smoking.

Take the Challenge

As a result of the base's high incidence of smokeless tobacco use, the Health and Wellness Center is initiating a base-wide challenge to reduce the rate of smokeless tobacco use among active-duty members.

The goals of the campaign are to: (1) increase the availability of accurate and up-to-date information about smokeless tobacco; (2) create a culture where it is less acceptable to initiate the use of these products; (3) challenge squadrons to encourage their users to quit; and (4) provide the resources and tools for users who are ready to quit and live a tobacco-free lifestyle.

The three month campaign called "The Quit Dip & Chew Challenge" will run from August - October.

The campaign includes a competition for squadron commanders to challenge their smokeless tobacco users to quit. The Squadron with the most participating members who attend a smokeless tobacco cessation workshop and attempt to quit will win a Culligan water cooler and four bottles of water.

For those who currently dip or chew smokeless tobacco - this challenge offers you with the ideal opportunity to change your life and improve your overall health and well-being. Get ready, get set and take the challenge! Call the HAWC at (660) 687-7662 for additional information.

Staff Sgt. Alonzo E. Warner, 509th Civil Engineer Squadron, deployed to Kirkuk Air Base, Iraq from August to March. He and his EOD team members were responsible for clearing routes for convoys, training Iraqi military members, and supporting the airfield by removing unexploded ordnance.

"We performed a lot of route clearance. We would go out looking in specific routes convoy's were going to travel," said Sergeant Warner. "If we found anything, we would dispose of it and collect evidence.

"The evidence would then be used to identify who placed the ordnance and the authorities would try to convict them," he said.

Sergeant Warner also helped train EOD Iraqi military members to identify and properly dispose of bombs.

Staff Sgt. Alonzo E. Warner, 509th Civil Engineer Squadron, recently returned from a deployment to Kirkuk Air Base, Iraq in. He and his EOD team members were responsible for clearing routes for convoys, training Iraqi military members, and supporting the airfield by removing unexploded ordnance.

'He partnered with Iraqi Police counter-explosive teams and built key improvised explosive device skill sets," said Capt. Thomas Powell, 506th expeditionary civil engineer squadron/ explosive ordinance disposal.

"When we go to a place like Iraq, it's important to help them out the best that we can and give them the training they need to be able to disarm bombs safely and with as little risk as possible to the populace," said Sergeant Warner.

While Sergeant Warner spent most of his time performing route clearance and training Iraqi military members, he also executed airfield support missions, something he doesn't normally do here.

"When aircraft came in and had hung flares or ordnance that didn't properly release, we downloaded it if it was dangerous enough that the weapons loaders wouldn't touch it," said Sergeant Warner.

Sergeant Warner said it wasn't easy being away from his wife and his two children, but he realized what he was there for and took the good with the bad and moved on.

By removing hazards created by unexploded ordnance Sergeant Warner was able to transform dangerous situations into safe ones, saving many lives along the way.

Missileer recalls stand down of 351st

By Airman 1st Class Torey Griffith 509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Whiteman Air Force Base and its associate units have a rich history of providing pivotal blows to America's enemies.

From the WACO Gliders of WWI that silently flew troops and supplies behind enemy lines, to the cutting edge of stealth bomber technology, the B-2, Whiteman's revolutionary missions have made it more than a dot on a map in Missouri, rather than an invaluable resource for the country's leaders as a first line for deterrence or a last resort for annihilation.

One such resource was the 351st Strategic Missile Wing, which called Whiteman home from Feb. 1, 1963, to July 31, 1995. During the last days of the Cold War, a lieutenant named Rick Milligan drove through the gates of Whiteman, on his first assignment as a missileer.

Now sporting birds on his collar, Col. Milligan, 509th Mission Support Group commander, finds himself again at Whiteman, again supporting a deterrent mission, but in a much different way.

"I got here in April of 1990," said the colonel. "The Berlin Wall had fallen, but the Soviet Union was still intact."

On Sept. 27, 1991, shortly after the fall of the Soviet Union, the 351st SMW's mission changed. President George H.W. Bush announced on national television a dramatic "plan for peace," designed to end the Cold War. His plan called for the withdrawal from alert of all 450 Minuteman II intercontinental ballistic missiles.

"When the President came on the television and said we were shutting the silos down, it was a Friday evening, and I was at home in Warrensburg," Colonel Milligan said. "He said effective immediately, all Minuteman II weapons systems will be shut down.

"I called out to the India site, out by Holden, which I was responsible for, and said, 'Guys, what's going on?' The Strategic Air Command digital integrated network, the same system we monitor today, was sending out messages to clear the launch codes out of the systems, essentially breaking the missiles, so they could not be flown."

The missileers were stunned.

"It was unprecedented," Colonel Milligan said. "It was something none of us thought would ever happen. When President Bush announced it, we were not expecting it. That next day, whether they had an alert or not, the entire wing showed up for the pre-departure briefing, because they wanted to know what was going on. The leadership was up there briefing, saying our mission and our alert status has changed. Things changed immensely after that, and we turned into a recovery crew.

The crews, whose job had been to put a constant threat on targets in Russia, now began the process of disarming and destroying the sites that had been ready to defend America for the last 30 years.

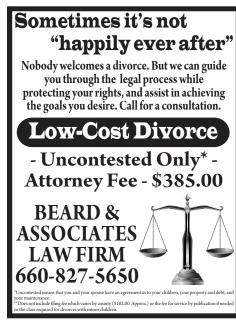

"We knew it was a sign of the times," the colonel said.

On July 31, 1995, the 351st SMW officially deactivated.

"As we started to shut things down, there became an excess of missile launch officers," said Colonel Milligan. "I cross trained into the B-2 site activation task force here at Whiteman. I helped bring in the flight simulators and worked a lot with Northrop-Grumman, setting up the back shops and support equipment. We also brought in the technical data. The library to support the B-2 is immense."

The colonel moved to Shaw AFB, SC, to do logistics planning for the 9th Air Force, and then to Aviano AB, Italy, to devise exercise support plans for the 16th Air Force. After 15 years at other assignments, including a three-year stint at the Pentagon, the colonel and his family is back at Whiteman.

"It's like coming home for us," he said. "I met my wife here. My first child was born here. My son is a star quarter back at Knob Noster, and his grandparents get to see him play. It's good to be back."

Hundreds of People Cash In at the Sedalia Roadshow Yesterday!

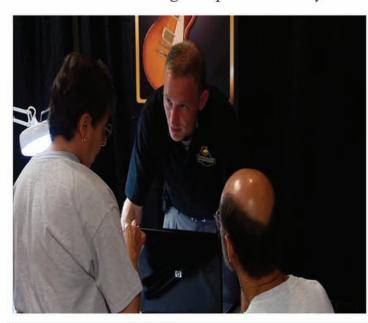

By Jason Delong Treasure Hunters Roadshow STAFF WRITER

Yesterday at the Holiday Inn Express, hundreds lined up to cash antiques, collectibles, gold and jewelry in at the Roadshow. The free event is in Sedalia all week buying gold, silver antiques and collectibles.

"It is unbelievable, I brought in some old coins that had been in a little cigar box for years and some old herringbone necklaces and in less than fifteen minutes I left with a check for $712.37."

One visitor I spoke with yesterday said "It's unbelievable, I brought in some old coins that had been in a little cigar box for years and some old herringbone necklaces and in less than fifteen minutes I left with a check for $712.37. That stuff has been in my jewelry box and dresser for at least 20 years." Another gentlemen brought an old Fender guitar his father bought years ago. "Dad had less than fifty bucks in that guitar." The Roadshow expert that assisted him, made a few phone calls and a Veterinarian in Seattle, Washington bought the guitar for $5700.00. The seller continued, "I got another $150.00 for a broken necklace and an old class ring, it's not everyday someone brings six thousand dollars to town with your name on it."

Jeff Parsons. President of the Treasure Hunters Roadshow commented, "Lots of people have items that they know are valuable but just don't know where to sell them.

Old toys, trains, swords, guitars, pocket watches or just about anything old is valuable to collectors. These offers will be made to purchase those items. About 80% of the guests that attend the show end up selling one or more items at the event.

Antiques and collectibles are not the only items the Roadshow is buying. "Gold and silver markets are soaring." says Archie Davis, a Roadshow representative. "Broken jewelry and gold orsilver coins add up very quickly. I just finished working with a gentleman that had an old class ring, two bracelets, and handful of silver dollars,... his check was for > over $650.00. I would say that there were well over 100 people in here yesterday that sold their scrap gold."

One gentleman holding his check for over $1250.00 in the lobby of the yesterday event had this comment, "I am so happy I decided to come to the Roadshow. I saw the newspaper ad for the event and brought in an old German sword I brought back from World War II and some old coins and here is my check. What a great thing for our community. I am heading home now to see what else I have they might be interested in."

The Roadshow continues today starting at 9am. The event is free and no appointment is needed.

Absentee Voting Week

Sept. 27 through Oct. 4 has been designated Absentee Voting Week for 2010.

If received, state absentee ballots should be marked and returned during this week. If not, a Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot can be submitted. Depending on voters' registered state, ballots may be emailed or faxed into local election officials.

FWAB is available at military bases, U.S.

embassies and consulates, election organization, corporations and www.fvap.gov, according to the Voting Assistance Guide.

Only the State ballot will be tallied if both are received by deadline.

For assistance, Whiteman personnel and dependents can contact their voting assistance counselors; call the Whiteman 24-hour voting action phone line at (660) 687-2868.

Out & About

Babysitter Training - For youth ages 11 and up. Participants will receive informational materials and instruction on topics such as fire awareness, home security, child care techniques, basic first-aid and age appropriate activities. Lunch and snacks are provided. Reservations required, call (660) 687-7132. Sept. 20, 9 a.m. -4 p.m.

Back To School, Back To Work (Spouses Workshop) - Going back to school or back to work after a lengthy absence to raise your children, relocate with your spouse, or other reasons? Attend this new Airman family readiness center class that will help you learn all of the latest trends in the workplace, find out more about college funding and scholarship opportunities for spouses, how to locate your past college transcripts to get them transferred to your current college, along with other tips on how to dress for success and to manage the time in your day. Reservations required, call (660) 687-7132. Sept. 9, 8:30-

Mentor Training - The mentoring program gives active duty, retired members and civilians the opportunity to assist local schools and motivate "at risk" students. If interested in becoming a mentor, the first training class will be held on Sept. 31, 1-3 p.m. Reservations required, call (660) 687-7132.

Parent Forum - Join the Airman family readiness center as Dr. Gary Kitto, Licensed Professional Counselor, facilitates an open forum on issues concerning children and parenting. Child monitoring will be available. Reservations required, call (660) 687-7132. Sept. 21, 6-8 p.m.

This Week at the Movies Saturday Sept. 4, 2010 - 7 p.m.

CIA officer Evelyn Salt is fingered as a Russian sleeper spy. She eludes capture by superiors who are convinced she is out to assassinate the president. While trying to reunite with her family, she struggles to prove someone else is the traitor. Rated PG-13 (intense sequences of action and intense sequences of violence) 105 min

Sunday Sept. 3, 2010 - 7 p.m. Romona And Beezus

Based on the "Ramona" series of novels written by Beverly Cleary. As everyone knows, Ramona Quimby lives on Klickitat Street. The stories of her adventures begin in Beezus and Ramona, where Beezus, who is just turning 10, finds 4-year-old Ramona an exasperating little sister! Rated G - 92 min Movie showings are featured at the Whiteman AFB Movie Theat Call the movie line at (660) 687-5110 for more information.
