USSTRATCOM Commander talks deterrence at Whiteman

By Capt. John Severns
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Gen. C. Robert Kehler, commander of U.S. Strategic Command at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., visited Team Whiteman Friday and spoke about deterrence and the role Airmen here play in America's national security strategy.

The general, who is responsible for plans and operations for all U.S. forces conducting strategic deterrence around the world, was at the central Missouri bomber base to meet with 509th Bomb Wing leadership and the Airmen who operate the B-2 Spirit. The radar-evading plane is part of the bomber leg of the nuclear triad, and along with missiles and submarines provides a powerful deterrent force to nations that might wish America harm.

"Our ability to perform the kind of missions the 509th performs around the world, most recently in Libya, while at the same time maintaining the capability to be a nuclear deterrent is really the tremendous value the bomber force has today," General Kehler said, referring to the ability of the B-2 to conduct both conventional strike missions such as in Libya and Iraq, while also playing a role in our nation's nuclear triad.

The realignment of the Air Force's nuclear enterprise under Global Strike Command, returning deterrence to a place of prominence in the Department of Defense, has been a positive development for Strategic Command and the nation as a whole, the general said.

"I think that all the steps the Air Force took to enhance the nuclear enterprise have benefited us," he said. "It makes our nuclear force ultimately more safe, secure and effective, and that's Strategic Command's #1 priority: to make sure that we have a safe, secure and effective nuclear deterrent."

The bulk of the general's comments, however, focused on what he called the "entire range" of capabilities the U.S. military can use as a deterrent or bring to bear against its enemies. This spectrum of force extends from nuclear weapons at the highest end to cyber-warfare and information operations on the non-kinetic side, he said.

"There is tremendous deterrent value with our conventional capabilities," he said. "There is deterrent value with our space capabilities and there's deterrent value with our cyber capabilities."

This wide range of strategic capabilities allows the U.S. to effectively deter nation states with nuclear capabilities while simultaneously engaging in conflicts against non-state actors such as al Qaeda, he added.

"There's a recognition that deterrence is about more than nuclear weapons," he said. "We've been given a number of responsibilities that go far beyond that: space, cyberspace and global strike, which includes conventional

The B-2 Spirit is a multi-role bomber capable of delivering both conventional and nuclear munitions. Its capability to penetrate air defenses and threaten effective retaliation provides a strong, effective deterrent and combat force well into the 21st century.

Remembering the sacrifices of those who came before us

By Lt. Gen. Jim Kowalski
Commander, Air Force Global Strike Command

Memorial Day is a time to remember military men and women who, in life, served our nation with honor. This Memorial Day many of us will enjoy the company of family and friends, but I'd also ask you to take time to remember our fallen and keep in your thoughts those serving overseas and on alert. As President Kennedy once said, "A nation reveals itself not only by the men it produces, but also by the men it honors, the men it remembers."

We are a nation with heartfelt memorials to our fallen Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, and Marines. Across the state line from our headquarters here in Louisiana, for instance, is the Civil War National battlefield at Vicksburg with a solemn collection of monuments. Every city or town honors its veterans with a monument or memorial. Consider taking time on this long weekend to visit a memorial near your home. For those of you with families it can be an opportunity to teach the meaning behind the words inscribed on the Korean War Memorial in Washington, D.C., "Freedom is not Free."

Also, as you enjoy your Memorial Day weekend, please do so safely. This weekend also begins the "101 Critical Days of Summer," when vacation, outdoor activities, and travel create more off-duty risk for our people and their families. Use caution, be good Wingmen, and enjoy a safe and happy Memorial Day weekend!

101 Critical Days of Summer: A time to live!

By Kevin Ennis
1st Special Operations Wing Safety Office

HURLBURT FIELD, Fla. -- The "101 Critical Days of Summer" clock is about to start ticking, and for those of us here on the Emerald Coast, the reality is: little will change.

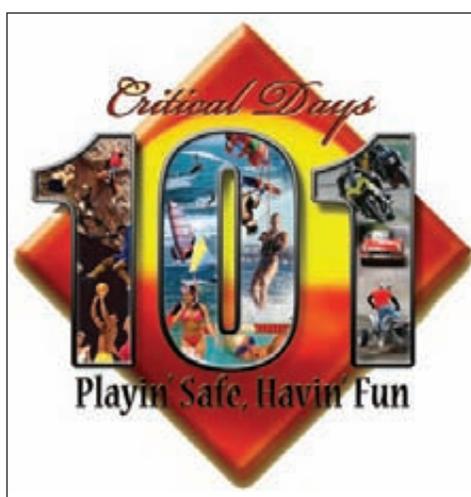

Summertime offers more opportunities for risky activities, and this year is no different. There is always the need for leaders, supervisors and wingmen to continue to promote mishap prevention and to help keep our Airmen safe.

Team Hurlburt has already lost two Airmen in preventable traffic-related mishaps in just the past few months. With summer travel plans taking shape and tourists flocking to our beaches, we know our exposure to risk will only increase in the weeks ahead.

For those who wonder why summer is such a critical time, try this approach.

If someone asked, "What's one thing you want to do before the end of summer?" How would you respond? Think about it for a second.

Your answer could range from: travel to see family and friends, go to the beach, play golf, hike, swim, go whitewater rafting, go jet skiing, ride a bike or any number of things.

In reality, the activities we participate in today are almost limitless, and each one involves some degree of risk, but I wonder if you would answer, "I want to live."

Sound strange? Maybe a little, but think about it-it encompasses everything you'll do this summer. It's about living through the summer with fond memories of family, friends and good times. This is much preferred to stories of scars, ambulance rides, hospital beds, or funeral homes.

Unfortunately, we know there is a good chance summer will bring injuries and some will be serious. We hope not, but hoping is not enough to prevent a mishap.

Last summer marked the first time in three years the 1st Special Operations Wing didn't experience a fatality during the summer--this was a great achievement. But even with our success, a number of Airmen across the Air Force lost their lives in preventable mishaps; their families and friends didn't enjoy last summer as we did.

This is where safety plays a part. We must look beyond that first glance to better recognize risk and plan summer events accordingly. Remain alert to hazards and focus on the task at hand.

When with fellow Airmen, be a good wingman. It takes courage, but when the opportunity comes up, a wingman won't hesitate to take action above and beyond what is normally expected to keep someone else safe-even though it might seem unpopular at the time.

We are all familiar with the saying "work hard, play hard." And as we gear up for the summer, I want to thank everyone for the hard work they do every day. There is nothing wrong with playing hard either, as long as it's not an excuse for taking foolish risks.

In other words: don't do something dumb.

The 101 Critical Days of Summer is an opportunity to travel, enjoy time off, relax and have fun, but one of the best things you can do this summer is stay alive!

Airmen share occupations at Knob Noster Middle School career fair

By Heidi Hunt

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

More than 25 representatives from Whiteman AFB volunteered to showcase their military occupation during a career fair with students at Knob Noster Middle School May 20.

Air Force Global Strike Command representatives brought gear and props associated with their mission to the fair. Classrooms were set up to share different skills and educational backgrounds to sixth, seventh and eighth graders and tailored them to their specific interests.

Tammy, a seventh grade student at Knob Noster Middle School, said she enjoyed all the Airmen's presentations, but her favorite demonstration was the combat arms instructor.

"I enjoyed when he let us handcuff each other and put on the bullet proof vest," she said. "It really got me interested in the military. It's cool some of things they get to do."

Staff Sgt. Jennifer Winkels, 509th Civil Engineer Squadron NCO in charge of service contracts, said the day was as much a learning experience for her as it was for the students.

"They really enjoyed the hands-on experience and using the survey equipment," Sergeant Winkels said. "It was great opportunity for the children to see us with their own eyes; working in a real world occupation that the children might want to do later on in life."

Becky Axton, KNMS's counselor-in-training, said she is thankful and appreciates members from Whiteman AFB volunteering their time to make the career fair a big success.

"I feel lucky that our school is close to an Air Force base because Whiteman has contributed to our school in many ways throughout the years," she said. "My hope is that students learned options for their future in the way of goals, education, job choices, and that students have a renewed sense of purpose; what they are doing now, in and out of the classroom, really does impact and influence their future."

Christopher Hinote, 509th Bomb Wing computer cyber security specialist and presenter, said that as a father of a student at KNMS he was glad to see the diverse group of people, military and non-military, who were willing to share their backgrounds and hopefully encourage his daughter to strive harder in school to meet her goals.

Participants were from the 509th Bomb Wing, Security Forces Squadron, Force Support Squadron, Operations Support Squadron, Logistics Readiness Squadron, Munitions Squadron, Medical Operations Squadron and 131st Operations Support Flight.

BCC reinforces civilian-military bond

By Airman 1st Class Montse Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

For the past 20 years, individuals from Whiteman AFB and 18 local communities have established a civilian-military partnership. The group of more than 350 members meets at the Mission's End here once a month to reinforce this alliance.

"This council consists of representatives from the local area and is chartered to support Air Force Global Strike Command Whiteman personnel," said Jesse Kellock, Base Community Council president. "Working alongside the military is a wonderful opportunity for civilian BCC members to work toward a mutual community interest."

Each squadron in the 509th Bomb Wing is assigned a partner community to get Airmen involved in local organizations and work with community members on various projects and events.

The BCC is comprised of members of team Whiteman and the cities of California, Clinton, Cole Camp, Columbia, Concordia, Higginsville, Holden, Jefferson City, Kansas City, Knob Noster, La Monte, Lexington, Lincoln, Marshall, Sedalia, Warrensburg, Warsaw and Windsor.

BCC luncheons are hosted by one or more communities and are scheduled the first Thursday of each month. The next BCC is June 2, and the featured communities are Lexington and Marshall.

The 509th Contracting Squadron represents Whiteman AFB through partnership with the community of Lexington.

Founded in 1822, Lexington overlooks the Missouri River, the artery that brought life and commerce to the city. It still possesses a distinctly Southern heritage, and is known for the dramatic three-day 'War Between the States,' also known as 'The Battle of the Hemp Bales,' according to the Lexington Chamber of Commerce.

"Strong partnerships with the communities surrounding Whiteman are a critical component to the continued success of the mission of the 509th Bomb Wing and tenant units, said Maj. Travis Pond, 509th Contracting Squadron commander. "Lexington has always been a strong supporter of Whiteman AFB, and the 509th Contracting Squadron is actively involved in annual events and activities that support the community of Lexington and its people.

Major Pond said they are very fortunate to have community leaders devoted to Whiteman AFB and the military members that live in the communities surrounding the base.

"The members of the 509th Contracting Squadron will continue to foster a strong partnership and be actively involved with our sister city of Lexington," Major Pond said.

A formation of T-38 jets roared overhead in the "missing man" formation, with one breaking out and climbing vertically, to close Saturday's 23rd Memorial Wreath Laying Ceremony May 21 at the Memorial Park Cemetery in Sedalia, Mo.

The ceremony honored 2nd Lt. George A. Whiteman, the Sedalia native and Smith Cotton High School graduate who was one of the first Americans killed in World War II and was posthumously awarded many commendations for his heroism and bravery. Lieutenant Whiteman died Dec. 7, 1941, as he attempted to take off in his P-40B Warhawk aircraft during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The legacy of Lieutenant Whiteman would continue when the Sedalia Air Field was renamed in his honor as Whiteman Air Force Base Dec. 3, 1955.

"I believe Lieutenant Whiteman would be so proud to know how wonderful the relationship is between the community he grew up in and the Airmen, Soldiers and Sailors at the military installation just down the road that was named in his honor," said Lt. Col. Kenneth G. O'Neil, 509th Security Forces Squadron commander and Air Force Global Strike Command member.

Members of Lieutenant Whiteman's family laid a memorial wreath on his gravesite before members of a Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2591 detail fired three volleys of shots.

'It is his legacy and spirit that we honor and remember him on this day. We are thankful for Lieutenant Whiteman for that fighting spirit he demonstrated and how that spirit resounded through evolution of our Air Force.'

Lt. Col. Kenneth G. O'Neil

"It is his legacy and spirit that we honor and remember him on this day," Colonel O'Neil said. "We are thankful for Lieutenant Whiteman for that fighting spirit he demonstrated and how that spirit resounded through evolution of our Air Force."

In addition, David Rouchka, member of the Military Affairs Committee said, "Freedom has a price. Freedom doesn't just happen. You have to nurture it and work for it and there are certain individuals who make the ultimate sacrifice to maintain the freedoms we enjoy today."

Airmen from the 509th SFS, Smith-Cotton High School Junior Reserve Officer Training Corp and members from the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2591 were in formation as part of tradition.

Next year's memorial service is scheduled for May 19, 2012.

Airman takes the plunge with U.S. Army Sappers

Story and photos by Airman 1st Class Cody H. Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Senior Airman Estiven Gonzalez, 509th Operations Support Squadron survival, evasion, resistance and escape specialist, joined the 35th Engineer Battalion Sapper Leader Course May 17 and 18 at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., to jump from a UH-60M Black Hawk helicopter.

SERE specialists teach aircrew everything they need to know to survive any environment, which could help them on missions and in the event their aircraft went down. To effectively train other Airmen on how to exit an aircraft while still flying and to maintain his own currency as a certified jumpmaster, Airman Gonzalez took to the skies with the Soldiers of the 35th Engineer Battalion.

Prior to a jump, all must be briefed and authorized to carry out the particular jump and ensure they are properly equipped. Airmen Gonzalez and the Sappers conducted a brief and jump rehearsals 24 hours before boarding their aircraft.

Day one started with the 35th Engineer Battalion recertifying jump statuses. The Soldiers and Airman Gonzalez packed parachutes, practiced exiting an aircraft and parachute control, and briefed a jump plan, which included positions and the drop zone. After hours of refreshing on techniques, the day ended.

Day two brought a focus on safety. Airman Gonzalez and the Sappers performed checks on each others' equipment to ensure proper assembly. Once a jump master had quality checked their gear, the jumpers boarded the Black Hawk.

The jumpers released at 15,000 feet, waited six seconds until their parachute deployed and guided themselves safely to the ground. Thirty jumpers went up and 30 jumpers landed safely.

Above top: FT. LEONARD WOOD, Mo. -- Senior Airman Estiven Gonzalez, 509th Operations Support Squadron survival evasion resistance escape instructor and jumpmaster, checks a parachute pull in preparation of a UH-60 Black Hawk jump May 18. Jumpmasters must check all jumpers' equipment before a jump. Above bottom: Airman Gonzalez practices parachute handling with members of the 35th Engineer Battalion Sappers Leadership School May 18. Many jumpers go months without jumps, so refreshing on skills beforehand is a must.

FT. LEONARD WOOD, Mo. -- Senior Airman Estiven Gonzalez, 509th Operations Support Squadron survival evasion resistance escape instructor, and members of the 35th Engineer Battalion Sappers Leadership School take off before their jump May 18. The UH-60 Black Hawk helicopter holds up to eight jumpers and flies at 15,000 feet before the jumpers release.

kinetic and non-kinetic planning.” The sum of those capabilities is what enables Strategic Command to deter attacks, and if deterrence fails, to defend against attacks, he said.

While he oversees command and control of the nation’s most powerful weapons, the general said he is most concerned with taking care of the men and women who volunteered to serve.

“What keeps me up at night is whether we are adequately taking care of the magnificent young men and women who choose to serve with us,” he said. “There is no operational issue that keeps me awake at night, and the reason is that the operations are in the hands of experts like you at the 509th.”

“We’ve had some concerns with stress across the entire force; it’s not just an Air Force problem though,” he added. “That’s what keeps me awake: are we doing everything we possibly can to take care of the people who volunteered to devote their time and energy to national security?”

The general’s thoughts were not only on the importance of Whiteman’s role in America’s security strategy, but on the men and women who perform the mission every day. “I hope the men and women of the 509th and Team Whiteman across the board understand their importance,” he said. “What they do every day is seen as a nationally important capability. Because it is so unique, its value continues to go up and will continue to go up as we look into the future.”

steeped in history from old Victorian homes to the Civil War Battle of Marshall. As in times past, the Marshall Municipal Band still performs on the lawn of the town square Thursday evenings during the summer, according to the Marshall chamber of commerce.

Lt. Col. Stanfield, 509th FSS commander and liaison for Marshall said he truly appreciates the support Whiteman AFB receives from the Marshall community and works to show Whiteman’s appreciation by giving back to the community in various events and projects.

“The 509th Force Support Squadron raised money and supplies for the city’s animal shelter, and we are currently in talks with city leadership about helping to re-fence the animal shelter,” he said. “This type of partnership is important and shows everyone that the military and its supporting community work together for the defense of our great nation and the betterment of the society in which we live.”

They accept VISA, MasterCard, cash, personal check or money order.
- Free ads are for one-time sale of personal items only. Free ads can't be placed for churches, groups, clubs, organizations or friends not affiliated with the military. Each item must be sold for $150 or less.
- Only one free ad*, maximum 30 words, will be allowed to run at any given time by the same household, for a maximum of eight weeks. Ads over the 30-word maximum will be edited at the publisher's discretion. *People who are PCSing may place more than one ad and sell the items at any price.

- Print legibly, and place punctuation and spaces where necessary. Use only one word per line.
- Free ads aren't taken over the phone. They must be dropped off at or mailed to the 509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs Office, 1081 Arnold Ave Blvd, Bldg 59, Whiteman AFB, Mo., 65305. Ads may also be faxed to 660-687-7948.

- Homes for sale that are listed with a realtor must be paid for. Only people who are PCSing and selling homes FSBO (for sale by owner) qualify as a free ad.
- Free yard sale ads are for active-duty, guard, reserve and retired military members living on or off base. People who live on base must have their yard sale approved by the housing office first.
