Active directory, exchange migration coming to Whiteman

By Steven L. Profer

509th Communication Squadron
Network Communication Center

Team Whiteman will begin migrating from its current network into what is known as the Air Force Network under the AF's Active Directory and Exchange migration project Nov. 8.

The day is fast approaching when all Air Force personnel will have the ability to log onto the network from any Air Force base and access their email, calendar, tasks file shares, SharePoint sites and many other applications and services just as if they were at their home station.

As part of the Air Force Communication Community's effort to improve network connectivity, this migration will allow the "total force" access to information regardless of their location. Through the use of Common Access Card enabled computers, users will now have 24/7/365 access from not only home station, but also from TDY and deployed Air Force locations around the world.

So what exactly does the term "network migration" really mean? In essence, all member network and email accounts (including BlackBerrys), as well as shared information files, will migrate from the base network into the global, Air Force-wide AFNet.

While most of these changes will be transparent to the user, the most noticeable change will be our email addresses. The migration replaces the old first.last@whiteman.af.mil email address with the standard first.last@us.af.mil email address, allowing central management of these accounts.

If more than one person has the same first and last name, the standard will be first.last.#@us.af.mil. In addition to global access to information and email, Airmen will be assigned a permanent email address they will carry throughout their career. This AFNet email address will never change no matter how many times they change duty stations.

So what will the migration do for me?

As previously mentioned, once an account is created, it remains yours throughout your career. One huge advantage is (whether you're TDY, deployed or in the middle of a PCS) you'll have access to an active and functioning email account, as long as you have access to a CAC and a CAC enabled computer.

In the past, Airmen had to wait for a new account to be created each time they went TDY, on a deployment, or PCS'd. With one centrally managed network and a lifelong account, this wait will be eliminated, leading to increased productivity and efficiency. One point worth noting is that Whiteman is just one of many AF locations that needs to migrate. Until every AF base migrates to the AFNet, the old format for email addresses may still apply if the base or the MAJCOM has not migrated.

How to change a culture of no

By Col. Rob Spalding

509th Operations Group Commander

Does your unit have a culture of no? If you're not sure, take this test. For the next week, count the number of times you or the others around you respond with a no whenever someone asks for something. If you find that no is the predominant response, maybe it's time to make a change.

Be prepared though, because you will find getting rid of the word "no" is easier said than done. Those who abuse the word no have a number of good reasons to continue doing so. Some are:

- Air Force Instructions prohibit it
- We don't have enough money
- We don't have enough personnel
- It's not our job

It may help the nay-sayers if you provide some historic examples of how leaders said yes when the easier and safer answer would have been no.

During the battle of Vicksburg, General Grant was finding the rebel forces difficult to dislodge. To get things moving, he decided it would be better to cut loose from his supply lines and travel cross country to attack Vicksburg from the rear. Many thought he was foolish, and when asked if this was a good idea Grant said probably no. The Army doctrine at the time would have backed them up for being technically correct. Grant, however, took a risk and said yes. He gathered supplies for a few days, lived off the land, and eventually was victorious. By saying yes, Vicksburg fell and the Mississippi was opened to Union shipping.

At the start of World War II, President Roosevelt needed a response to Pearl Harbor that would inspire Americans, and demoralize the Japanese. He turned to the U.S. Air Force for a response. Jimmy Doolittle was asked to fly B-25s off of an aircraft carrier. He could have said no. The effort was dangerous and promised low probability for returning alive. Instead Doolittle and his Airmen stripped their B-25s to the bare minimum, practiced low speed take-offs until they were sure they could get airborne, and flew into history.

In 2007, faced with deteriorating conditions in Iraq, President Bush decided to surge troops. It was a gamble, and numerous political and military leaders said it was an impossible task. President Bush said yes to a plan many said were destined to fail. The outcome was a decline in violence and a stable Iraq. Again, the President could have taken the route critics wanted, but the people of Iraq would have faced a horrible future. In addition, America would have left the region in defeat.

These three examples have similar themes. The first is that any of the leaders involved would not have been criticized for saying no. In each case the easy and secure answer would have been to say no.

Second, saying yes involved taking a risk. In each case, the leaders involved risked their careers and in some cases their life by saying yes. Finally, saying yes resulted in resounding victory. By saying yes, these American leaders continued a long history of defying the odds and taking the unconventional path that led to a better future. Each day we face small decisions that may not find their way in the history books, but they advance our cause just the same.

The next time you hear someone in your office or workspace saying no, try to help them say yes. Offer them this alternative instead – "yes, and" or "yes, but." For example: yes, and these are things that must be done; or yes, but we must do this first. In doing so, you will take your place among other American leaders who have said yes, and led our nation to freedom and prosperity throughout our history.

Commander's Corner

Team Whiteman,

As AFGSC nears its first year as a fully operationally capable organization, I want to applaud everyone who has directly contributed to this successful milestone in our Air Force history.

Almost two years ago the Air Force began restructuring the nuclear enterprise, re-aligning the 509th Bomb Wing under AFGSC. Since then, we have continued our successful, steady course as responsible stewards of our nation's most fearsome weapons. However, we cannot stop now. Our responsibility is to continue making history we are proud of, history our children and Nation will be proud of.

Reinvigorating the nuclear enterprise is not an easy task, and it will require many more years of effort. I am confident, however, that the men and women of this wing are more qualified than anyone else in the Air Force to accomplish our chief's number one priority.

As we talk about historic milestones in our Air Force and the hard work we've put in, there is another local milestone I had the privilege to be a part of this past week: the inauguration of Dr. Charles Ambrose, the University of Central Missouri's 15th president. Dr. Ambrose's dedication to military members can be seen wherever you look on campus, but it is especially apparent in the new Whiteman Advantage fee waiver he introduced.

We are fortunate to have a strong local military advocate such as Dr. Ambrose, among many others. I look forward more Military Appreciation events such as the football game this past Sunday.

Finally, as many of you know, this weekend is also historical as we celebrate Columbus Day on Monday. Enjoy the extended weekend, remember to be a good wingman and watch out for your fellow Airmen.

Defensor Vindex.

Commander

Better than I deserve

By Lt. Col. Travis Burdine

20th Reconnaissance Squadron Commander

How do you respond to the common American greeting, "How are you today?" It is a question we get five to 10 times a day. When asked, "How are you?" one often hears "I am good," or the more grammatically correct, "I am well."

A few years back I heard the nationally syndicated radio talk-show host, personal finance guru, author and Fox News financial anchor Dave Ramsey respond with, "Better than I deserve." It got me thinking . . . how am I today?

I know there are more than 220 countries on the planet, and we were born in the United States of America. I often think of the children in Afghanistan, in their mud huts, with no electricity, no car, no internet and very little security. That easily could have been any one of us. What did we do to deserve to be born in the greatest country in the world, at one of the most prosperous times in history?

I know most of us reading this have never been hungry enough to be malnourished. Many of us have never been without clean drinking water. We all have (or have access to) excellent educational opportunities. In my case I went to the U.S. Air Force Academy on a full ride scholarship . . . what did I do to deserve that?

Many of us have never had to sleep without adequate shelter over our heads. Many of us who live on base have brand new or remodeled houses, and those on active duty have housing provided as part of our jobs. What did we do to deserve the quality food, water, shelter and clothing that we enjoy every day?

I know that serving in the greatest Air Force the planet has ever seen is another privilege that we will not appreciate until we are older. We worked hard to get here; it was not easy . . . but to serve and defend one's country is one of the noblest of professions -- to do it at a time that it is politically popular, socially appreciated, and during a time of war is nearly unheard of.

Every time I walk into a store downtown in uniform someone says, "Thank you." What did we do to deserve such a reliable and well-respected profession?

I know under my own roof I have a wonderful family that loves me. My beautiful wife and four smart, cute, unique children (with one more on the way) are blessings that I thank God for everyday. What did we do to deserve such loving and caring families?

I know that Whiteman AFB has a full Exchange, commissary, theater, fitness center, outdoor recreation, swimming pool, community center and club. My last base had none of those things (okay, it had a gym). What did we do to deserve being stationed at Whiteman AFB?

How am I today? I am "better than I deserve." What did you do to deserve the many blessings in your life? I challenge you to try a new response to the common question. I will admit the first 20 times you try to say, "Better than I deserve," it may seem awkward because it is not a typical response. It always catches people off guard, and makes them think for a second . . . "What does that mean?" Many will get it pretty quickly . . . that we have many blessings in our lives, and we should not forget that we really are "better than we deserve." Take the challenge . . . how are you today?

- Wait until pedestrians have crossed the entire road before resuming travel.
- Never pass another vehicle that has stopped the entire road before resuming travel.
- Yield to pedestrians in crosswalks and at intersection.

From the Frontlines: Staff Sgt. Cass Vaughn

By Senior Airmen Cody H. Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Staff Sgt. Cass Vaughn, 509th Medical Operations Squadron NCO in charge of occupational health, left Whiteman Jan. 4 for a six-month deployment, returning July 13.

While deployed the sergeant took his health profession to the frontlines – Kandahar Air Field, Afghanistan – where he was the NCO in charge of public health.

“I was the first person from my career field at this deployed location,” said Vaughn.

His duties included food safety and security inspections; sanitation; medical entomology programs; vector borne, communicable, and occupational disease prevention and control; public health medical readiness activities; and promoting and providing health education and training.

Vaughn said he was appointed the lead inspector for 40 local counties and conducted more than 120 food inspections while deployed.

“I was a one man shop working 12 to 14 hour days, six days a week,” Vaughn said, showing the difference between his deployed work tempo and that here (he is part of a five man shop that works office hours).

“For me, time management was the biggest difference,” he added.

He also had the opportunity to work with sister services - the Navy Preventive Medicine and entomology section setting traps for sand flies and mosquitoes – and the Army veterinarians to track down food sources and determine if it came from an approved source.

Throughout the deployment Vaughn said he had many great experiences, but he said the best part of his time on the frontline was spent volunteering once a week at the Contingency Aeromedical Staging Facility.

“We helped load wounded warriors on air evacuation,” Vaughn said. “It really put my deployment into perspective because I saw firsthand the cost of war.”

Vaughn said while deployed he missed his wife, “I was in a stressful environment and I found myself separating my emotions to stay focused.”

The six months were stressful, but rewarding, according to Vaughn. He said he enjoyed the new experience, but is happy to be home.

Fire Prevention Week

October 9-15

 Brig. Gen. Scott Vander Hamm, 509th Bomb Wing Commander, gives a thumbs up with Sparky the Fire Dog and Smokey the Bear and after signing the Fire Prevention Proclamation Sept. 21. Fire Prevention Week has been declared as Oct. 9-15 and Whiteman Fire and Emergency Services have planned venues on base to educate the base populace on fire prevention.

Whiteman AFB Fire Prevention Proclamation 2011

WHEREAS, Whiteman AFB is committed to ensuring the safety and security of all those living in and visiting Whiteman AFB; and

WHEREAS, fire is a serious public safety concern both locally and nationally, and homes are the locations where people are at greatest risk from fire; and

WHEREAS, home fires killed more than 2,500 people in the United States in 2009, according to the latest research from the nonprofit National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), and fire departments in the United States responded to more than 360,000 home fires; and

WHEREAS, cooking equipment is the leading cause of home structure fires and associated injuries, and the third leading cause of home fire deaths; and

WHEREAS, heating and electrical equipment and smoking materials are among the leading causes of all reported home fires; and

WHEREAS, home candle fires are reported to a US fire department every 30 minutes, on average; and

WHEREAS, the risk of dying in a home structure fire caused by smoking materials rises with age; and

WHEREAS, working smoke alarms cut the risk of dying in reported home fires in half; and

WHEREAS, Whiteman AFB first responders are dedicated to reducing the occurrence of home fires and home fire injuries through prevention and protection education; and

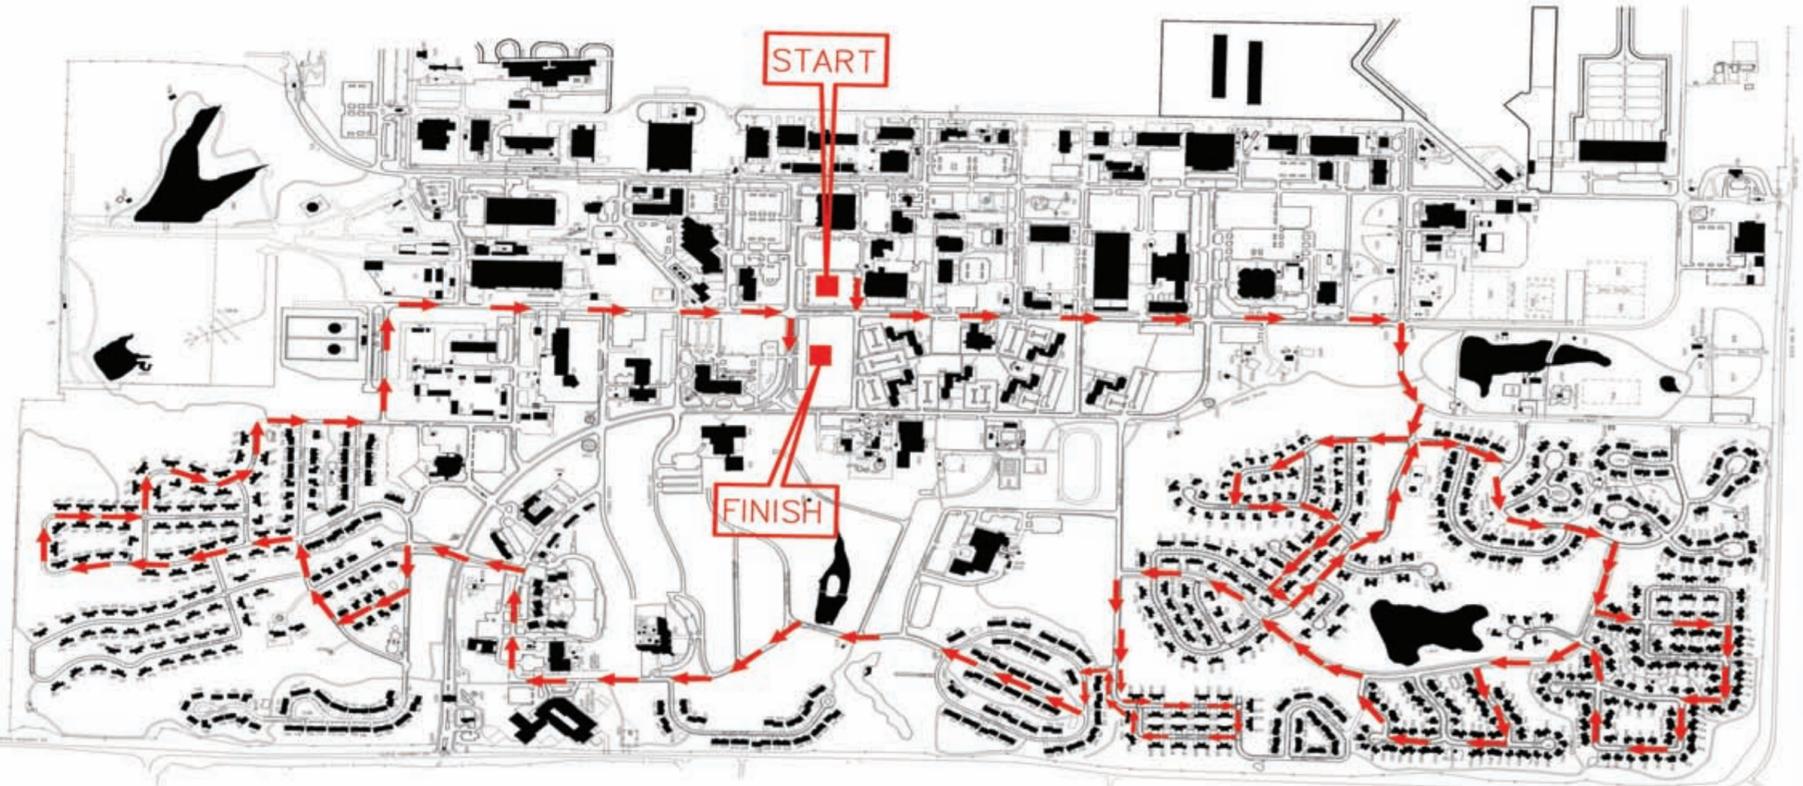

WHEREAS, Whiteman AFB residents are responsive to public education measures and are able to take personal steps to increase their safety from fire, especially in their homes; and

WHEREAS, residents who have planned and practiced a home fire escape plan are more prepared and will therefore be more likely to survive a fire; and

WHEREAS, the 2011 Fire Prevention Week theme, "It's Fire Prevention Week. Protect your Family from Fire!" effectively serves to remind us all of the simple actions we can take to keep our homes and families safe from fire during Fire Prevention Week and year-round.

THEREFORE, I Brigadier General SCOTT A. VANDER HAMM, Commander of the 509th Bomb Wing, do hereby proclaim Oct. 9-15, 2011 as Fire Prevention Week throughout this state, and I urge all people of Whiteman AFB to protect their homes and families by heeding the potentially life-saving messages of Fire Prevention Week 2011, and to support the many activities and efforts of Whiteman AFB fire and emergency services.

SCOTT A. VANDER HAMM
 Brigadier General, USAF
 Commander, 509th Bomb Wing

It's fire prevention week, protect your family

Encouraging residents to keep their homes safe

(Submission courtesy of Whiteman AFB Fire Emergency Services)

What's the best way to protect your family from fire? Be ahead of the game, of course. More than 360,000 home fires were reported in the U.S. in 2009, according to the nonprofit National Fire Protection Association, and the best defense is a good offense.

The Whiteman Fire Emergency Services is teaming up with NFPA and is hosting activities Oct. 9-15 during Fire Prevention Week to promote, "It's Fire Prevention Week. Protect your Family from Fire" Through these educational, family-oriented activities, residents can learn more about the power of prevention and available technologies to protect their own families from fire.

This year's campaign focuses on preventing the leading causes of home fires -- cooking, heating and electrical equipment, as well as candles and smoking materials. Additionally, it urges people to protect their homes and families with life-saving technology and planning.

"In 2009, 2,565 people died in home fires," said Paul Williams, Whiteman AFB Fire Emergency Services Assistant Chief Fire Prevention. "Nearly all of these deaths could have been prevented by taking a few simple precautions like having working smoke alarms and a home fire escape plan, keeping things that can burn away from the stove and always turning off space heaters before going to bed.

"Fire is a dangerous opponent, but by anticipating the hazards, you are much less likely to be one of the nearly 13,000 people injured in home fires each year," Williams added.

Whiteman AFB Fire Department offers the following tips for protecting your home and family from fire:

- * Stay in the kitchen while you are frying, grilling, or broiling food. If you leave the kitchen for even a short period of time, turn off the stove.
  - * Keep anything that can burn at least three feet away from heating equipment, like the furnace, fireplace, wood stove, or portable space heater.
  - * Have a three-foot "child-free zone" around open fires and space heaters.
  - * Replace or repair damaged or loose electrical cords.
  - * If you smoke, smoke outside.
  - * Use deep, wide ashtrays on a sturdy table.
  - * Blow out all candles when you leave the room or go to bed. Avoid the use of candles in the bedroom and other areas where people may fall asleep.
- "While preventing home fires at Whiteman is always our number one priority, it is not always possible," Williams said. "Whiteman's residents need to provide the best protection to keep their homes and families safe in the event of a fire. This can be achieved by developing an escape plan which you practice regularly and equipping homes with life-saving technologies like smoke alarms and home fire sprinklers."
- The following tips will help keep your family safe if there is a fire in your home:
- * Install smoke alarms inside each bedroom, outside each sleeping area and on every level of the home (including the basement).
  - * Interconnect all smoke alarms in the home so when one sounds, they all sound.
  - * Test smoke alarms at least monthly and replace all smoke alarms when they are 10 years old or sooner if they do not respond when tested.
  - * Make sure everyone in your home knows how to respond if the smoke alarm sounds.
  - * Pull together everyone in your household and make a plan. Walk through your home and inspect all possible ways out. Households with children should consider drawing a floor plan of your home, marking two ways out of each room, including windows and doors.
  - * If you are building or remodeling your home, consider installing home fire sprinklers.

Each year during the first week of October fire officials across the country strive to raise awareness concerning fire safety. This year is no exception as Whiteman Fire and Emergency Services events planned to educate the base populace.

Winterize your body

By Airman 1st Class
Montse Ramirez
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Cold weather usually puts an extra strain on the body and mind, so it is crucial for Team Whiteman members to take precautionary steps to keep it healthy this winter.

In order to stay safe physically and mentally, consider the following tips given by the 509th Medical Operations Squadron mental health clinic and the 509th Bomb Wing safety office.

“The majority of military members are far away from their family and usually don’t get to spend the holidays with them due to lack of time and money,” said Senior Airman Megan Sampson, 509th MDOS mental health technician. “Calling family members and not staying indoors all day can help Airmen from being depressed during the winter months.

“Having a place to go during the holidays whether it’s a friend or co-worker’s house and staying active are the best ways to combat depression,” Sampson said.

Keeping active can be tricky though, because over doing it can be dangerous to bodies already working hard to stay warm, according to Staff Sgt. Fatima Bello, 509th BW safety technician.

“Hitting the gym is a great way to keep active to help beat the cold environment,” she said. “Drinking plenty of water is just as important during the winter because the air is denser so people get dehydrated faster, even though they don’t sweat as much. Stretching is also a must to loosen up muscles and prevent injuries.”

To prevent frostbite, Bello recommends Whiteman members dress appropriately for winter, with hats, scarves, mittens and several layers of loose-fitting clothing.

“Taking preventative action is your best defense against having to deal with extreme cold-weather conditions,” Bello said. “By preparing in advance for winter weather, you can reduce the risk of weather-related health problems.”

(Editor’s note: This is the second of a three-part series highlighting winter readiness.)

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

"The results are positive, you have breast cancer."

The doctor's words isolated Julie Jolly's body and mind, 509th Force Support Squadron Child Development Center director. Questions and concerns immediately flooded her head.

She was about to embark on unfamiliar territory, and she tried to figure out her next move.

Julie's doctor scheduled her biopsy in January 2011, less than a month after her mammogram.

She read every piece of information she could find, which she said wasn't in her best interest. There were so many things online that scared her and made her feel worse.

Her tumor was the size of a dime and her doctor said she was in stage 1E, and it was an aggressive tumor, which meant the cancer was growing fast. Fortunately, she was a candidate for a mammoSite, which delivers radiation from inside the space left after surgeons remove the breast tumor. Radiation is delivered through seed implants, which are planted inside a balloon that is placed inside the woman's breast, according to www.cancer.org.

After that process healed, she endured six rounds of chemotherapy. During the process, Julie had four blood transfusions because of her fluctuating blood count.

Her doctor ordered her to be extremely careful and not do anything that would cause her to bleed.

Julie decided to unravel her story with her staff and recommended they make an appointment for breast cancer screening.

"Shortly after, a co-worker went and got checked and found out she had a spot also, which was a lot like mine," she said "By getting checked early enough, the cancer wasn't yet in an aggressive stage ... It was scary."

Julie knew one of the side effects of chemotherapy was that she would lose her hair, which for many women can be a traumatic experience.

"It began to fall out by the handfuls, so my husband helped me cut it and I bought a wig," she added. "It was one of the worst experiences."

It would be easy for many to adopt a pessimistic attitude about Julie's circumstance, but she believed in the power of positive thinking, especially when she had the support of family, friends, strangers and others going through similar situations.

"It's funny because there were people that I didn't even know offering positive support," she said. "There was one woman I met during chemo, in her 80s, and her attitude was so positive and so helpful that I thought if she can do it, then there is hope for me."

Julie's staff has also been supportive and wanted Julie to focus on battling the disease.

"They helped take care of work and have helped through this transition," she said. "They are a supportive team."

Julie said she is very fortunate to have such a close family and said they have been behind her 100 percent.

"My mother is a fighter ... She has overcome a huge hurdle," said Jennifer, Julie's daughter. "She gives me the courage to get through anything I may need to face, because nothing I face can compare to the fear, pain and struggle she went through during her treatment."

"The day I asked her what she was going to do about cancer, my mom said, 'I'm going to fight it.' ... That was the happiest day of my life."

Julie continues to combat her cancer because she can't imagine not being there for her family.

"I've got too much I want to do," Julie said.

"I can't express enough how grateful I am to have such a supportive husband and family," she said. "They have been great through everything ... and continue to."

Since her diagnoses Julie has participated in community events such as Relay for Life and plans to work more with survivors once she completes her last chemotherapy session April 7, 2012.

Her hair is starting to grow back, but she still experiences weakness and can't walk as far as she used to without getting worn out.

"I never thought it would happen to me," Julie said "If I would have put it off another year, who knows what would happen."

"I am lucky I caught it as early as I did and I encourage others to do the same," she said.

Julie had a mammogram in July 2011 and the results were clear, but must get one every six-months to ensure the cancer doesn't return.

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month and in efforts to help fight this disease, the Fitness Center is hosting a 5K Wing Breast Cancer Run Oct. 14. Runners should be in place at 6:30 a.m. and begin time is 7 a.m.

Man vs. Food competition

U.S. Air Force photo/Staff Sgt. Alexandra M. Boutte

Senior Airman Joel Vidot, 509th Security Forces Squadron, participates in the Man versus Food Half-time Competition at Mission's End Oct. 2. The challenge was to eat 12 extra spicy habanera wings in 45 minutes during the football game's half-time show. Vidot inhaled the wings at the alarming rate of all 12 wings in merely seven minutes. Mission's End is hosting the Almighty Sub Sandwich Challenge Oct. 16 at 12:30 p.m. with four participants taking on the competition.

While the us.af.mil address will still work in that case, it will direct your email to the account created at that base. The post migration email will appear and function the same as before, and users will still be able to access common applications such as email, calendars, contact list, and shared files.

Some other noticeable benefits include information security and a reduction in the time it takes to patch computer systems and eliminate potential vulnerabilities. Another change will be standardized mailbox sizes based on user categories. Some personnel in the 509th Bomb Wing, Whiteman AFB will see their storage capacity double. The new limits are as follows:

□ Category 1 (1GB): Senior Decision Makers and Associated Organizational Mailboxes

□ Category 2 (500MB): Essential Support Personnel and Associated Organizational Mailboxes

□ Category 3 (100 MB): Standard Users and Associated

The migration will also result in a consolidated customer service help desk called the Enterprise Service Desk (ESD). The ESD will serve as a "one-stop" shop for the resolution of common user problems and can be reached at DSN 945-2900, or Commercial at 210-925-2900.

How will I be notified of the migration?

The migration will be completed in phases, and in close coordination with the local communications squadron. Migration information will flow a number of ways, and will include computer screen pop-ups, emails, base newspaper articles, and via the AF link/portal.

Each unit will be notified individually via email prior to the migration and asked to follow a few simple steps to help ensure a successful migration. Included in these directions will be detailed steps on how to create back-up and personal storage (.PST) files. The 509th BW will approve and release a unit-by-unit migration schedule to help minimize impact to normal operations.

Because it could take up to two days for new account information to propagate the Air Force Network, an official notice will be posted on the AF Portal informing users that 509th BW, Whiteman AFB AFNet email addresses may not be recognized in the Global Address List.

The 509th Communications Squadron will send separate and specific instructions concerning Personal Digital Assistant (PDAs) devices and how to move emails to Exchange servers to prevent deletion. On-base technicians will be available to lend assistance and prevent the loss of data.

As with any change, there will be challenges, however, the benefits are great—and we only touched on a few. The AFNet and ESD will provide us greater flexibility and ease of management of the network enterprise. Further information is available through your local communications squadron or by accessing the FAQs through the following link: <https://cs.eis.af.mil/a6/programs/adx/MAJCOM/default.aspx>
