Great futures start here: Exceptional WAFB teen wins Youth of the Year honor

Malina Colburn, a youth from Whiteman Air Force Base, Missouri, will compete in Jefferson City, Mo., in April 2016 for the title of Missouri Military Youth of the Year. Youth of the Year is a scholarship competition through Boys & Girls Clubs of America (BGCA).

Colburn recently won the Whiteman AFB Youth of the Year competition and will receive a $300 college scholarship from Whiteman AFB Youth Programs. At 16 years old, she is a true example of an extraordinary young woman with sound character, leadership skills and a willingness to give back to the community.

Being named Youth of the Year is the highest honor a Whiteman AFB Teen Programs member can receive. As BGCA's premier youth recognition program, Youth of the Year recognizes outstanding contributions to a member's family, school, community and teen center, as well as success overcoming personal challenges and obstacles. The Youth of the Year competition encourages teens to reach their full potential by achieving academic success, leading healthy lifestyles and contributing to their communities. Honorees are shining examples and living proof that great futures can start at Whiteman AFB Youth Programs.

"We are very proud of Malina," said Kimberly O'Brien, the Whiteman AFB teen coordinator. "She is dedicated to academics and completed over 250 hours of volunteer service this past summer."

Colburn hopes to use her success as a stepping stone to her goals.

"This gets me one step closer to my dream of attending the University of Wisconsin, Madison," she said.

Malina Colburn

Colburn is active in the CLIMB High program with Big Brothers Big Sisters, while also participating in the debate team and is in several honors classes in high school.

If she wins the state title, Colburn will then compete for the title of Midwest Region Military Youth of the Year and an additional $10,000 scholarship. Six regional winners will then advance to Washington, D.C., to compete for the title of BGCA's National Military Youth of the Year. The National Youth of the Year will receive an additional scholarship of up to $50,000 and have the opportunity to meet with the president of the United States in the White House.

DLA Document Services - More than a printer for the Department of Defense

As a field activity of the Defense Logistics Agency (DLA), Document Services has been serving the Department of Defense (DOD) for over 60 years. While some refer to the organization as the DOD's printer, it offers much more than that basic description implies.

DLA Document Services provides printing and copying at many installations around the world. However, its core services reflect its mission to transform the DOD from high volume print and duplication to lower volume print on-demand and the use of online documents, electronic content and records management. In other words, DLA Document Services enables customers to increase functionality of their documents, while lowering costs.

Core capabilities include the conversion of hardcopy documents and media to standard digital formats, building libraries of digital content with online access and the provision of networked multifunctional devices (MFDs) that print, copy, scan and fax in customer workspaces.

DLA Document Services provides scanning and conversion services for all types of documents. Skilled technicians scan documents of any size, from business cards to large format engineering drawings, and convert them to a host of digital formats. DLA Document Services has converted and indexed for easy search and retrieval, more than one-half billion images to customer-specified digital formats.

DLA Document Services' Electronic Document Management (EDM) program is a service to build digital libraries of documents with online access. EDM solutions are DOD directive 5015.2 records management compliant and enhance business processes by providing advanced content lifecycle management and workflow functionality. One example, the Electronic Document Management Service, assists DLA distribution sites worldwide with digital capture, processing, management and storage for millions of shipping documents.

DLA Document Services is also one of the government's largest providers of office document equipment solutions. Its Equipment Management Solutions (EMS) program provides networked MFDs that print, scan, copy and fax all in one compact system. With its leveraged buying power and all-inclusive flat rate pricing, DLA Document Services provides the best value solutions at the lowest possible cost. DLA Document Services currently manage more than 34,000 devices DOD-wide.

The organization's EMS equipment assessment program helps agencies eliminate and consolidate costly single-function, desktop devices and replaces them with networked MFDs. Assessments are a value-added service that benchmark existing device inventory and operating costs, identify the organization's document equipment needs and deliver a set of recommendations on the optimal rightsizing mix of equipment. On average, assessments identify an annual savings potential of 25-30 percent for customers while increasing capacity and capability.

DLA Document Services is co-located with customers at more than 150 production facilities, primarily located on U.S. military installations around the world. The organization also has a facility in the Pentagon, in support of DoD senior leadership, and in the White House, serving as the document solutions provider to the president of the United States. For example, each year, DLA Document Services produces the booklet containing the script of the president's State of the Union speech to Congress. It is provided for duplication within just a few hours of the president's address.

With the production of many sensitive and classified documents, DLA Document Services places a great amount of focus on security. All employees have background checks that qualify them for security clearances and are well versed in security procedures. Information Assurance (IA), the security of networks and systems, is a major thrust for the organization – ensuring protection of customer's documents.

Whether it is printed or digital media, DLA Document Services is counted on as the trusted document solutions provider to the president of the United States, the DOD, other Executive Branch Federal agencies and the American service men and women stationed around the world.

UH-60 Black Hawks touch down at Whiteman

A Missouri Army National Guard UH-60 Black Hawk utility helicopter, left, sits next to an AH-64 Apache attack helicopter on the flightline at Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo., April 1, 2016. Black Hawk helicopters began arriving at the 1-135th Attack Reconnaissance Battalion in September of 2015 as part of the Department of the Army's Aviation Reconstruction Initiative. There are now 13 Apaches and 10 Black Hawks assigned to the unit.

Missouri Army National Guard Staff Sgt. Keith Neiman, a crew chief assigned to the 1-135th Attack Reconnaissance Battalion Army Aviation Support Facility #1, performs routine maintenance on a UH-60 Black Hawk utility helicopter at Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo., April 1, 2016. More than 90 enlisted aircraft maintainers, who previously only worked on the AH-64 Apache, are in the process of certifying to perform maintenance on Black Hawks following the helicopter's recent arrival.

Missouri Army National Guard Chief Warrant Officer 4 Marcus Moore, a standardized instructor pilot, left, and Staff Sgt. Brandon Isabell, a crew chief, both assigned to the 1-135th Attack Reconnaissance Battalion (ARB) Army Aviation Support Facility #1, perform pre-takeoff inspections on a UH-60 Black Hawk at Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo., April 1, 2016. Due to the Department of the Army's Aviation Reconstruction Initiative, nine AH-64 Apaches from the 1-135th ARB were moved to active-duty Army units across the country, and the 1-135th ARB received 10 Black Hawk helicopters.

By Airman 1st Class Michaela R. Slanchik
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Many may know the Black Hawk helicopter from their favorite military movie. As it prepares to land, the rotors swirl dust, dirt and debris around brave men and women who are geared-up and carrying weapons as they sprint toward the helicopter to take on the day's mission. Maybe you've seen the Black Hawk sport its ability to carry a Humvee across a field, or put out a wildfire with a 600-gallon bucket of water. Now these remarkable assets are here at Whiteman Air Force Base, Missouri.

The Missouri National Guard's helicopter fleet at Whiteman formerly consisted of 24 AH-64 Apaches. Now only eight remain after many were sent to active-duty units in Hawaii, Kansas and Utah. This made space for the arrival of 10 UH-60 Black Hawks.

The change was part of the Department of the Army's Aviation Reconstruction Initiative, which involves the movement of the OH-58 Kiowa Warrior, AH-64 Apache and UH-60 Black Hawk due to sequestration budget cuts, as announced in 2015.

Since September of 2015, 10 Black Hawks now call Whiteman home. They are assigned to the 1-135th Attack Reconnaissance Battalion (ARB), Army Aviation Support Facility #1 (AASF #1).

The National Guard's mission includes humanitarian and natural disaster relief, large-scale transportation of supplies, and drug interdiction operations.

Col. Thomas Burson, the 35th Combat Aviation Brigade (CAB) and AASF #1 commander, elaborated on how the new helicopter has affected operations.

"The Guard has a federal and a state mission," Burson said. "The Black Hawk serves more of a state mission since it is a cargo and troop-carrying helicopter. The switch makes active duty, Reserve and Guard units more lethal and agile."

With a proven history that dates back to the early 1970s, the Black Hawk provides the ability to carry cargo, external loads, military working dogs (MWD) and passengers. The helicopter is also capable of performing medical evacuations.

Before the Black Hawks' arrival at Whiteman, the Apache would participate in combat search and rescue (CSAR) exercises with the 442nd Fighter Wing two to four times a month.

Chief Warrant Officer 4 Marcus Moore, an AASF #1 Air Crew Training Program standardization instructor pilot, said the arrival of the new helicopters has added another element to the scenarios.

"Now that we have Black Hawks and Apaches, when we are doing combat search and rescue (CSAR) missions, we have A-10s [Thunderbolt II] guiding in Apaches and Black Hawks and it makes for a more effective training," Moore said.

The AASF #1 also performs joint operations with the U.S. Air Force weapons school at Whiteman twice a year. In the winter of 2015, the Black Hawk participated in exercise SMOKEX along with ground Army personnel, Apaches and A-10s.

"The goal is to train and fight as a joint force," said Burson. "Between CSAR and other training missions, we've been doing that on base for the past eight to 10 years."

For the soldiers of the 1-135th ARB AASF #1, flying and maintaining the UH-60 is new and requires specialized training.

Earlier this year, Moore returned from four months of training and became a certified Black Hawk pilot. More than 50 aviators and 90 enlisted maintainers from AASF #1 are required to attend qualification training at one of three Army aviation training sites. The soldiers have three years to become combat-mission ready with the Black Hawk.

"I've been born and raised in an attack battalion," said Burson. "But overall, the best thing for the Missouri Army National Guard and the United States Army is for us to transition from the Apache to the UH-60. I believe it in my heart."

The 1-135th ARB is scheduled to convert to the 1-135th Assault Helicopter Battalion on May 1, 2016.
