AFBSC YEAR OF THE FAMILY

Weekly commander's message

Greetings, Team Whiteman!

This week our Total Force team had the privilege of hosting the Air Force Global Strike Command (AFGSC) Senior Leader Conference. This was a great opportunity to show dozens of military and civic leaders from across the command why we are America's premier bomber force and our team rose to the challenge as always! Our guests were amazed at your professionalism and dedication ... and they were equally impressed when they saw the B-2 up close! Hosting this high-visibility event took a lot of hard work and involved a lot of late nights, so please allow me to thank everyone one more time who made this terrific event possible ... THANK YOU for the great work and making the conference an outstanding event!

While visiting for the Senior Leader Conference, Gen. Robin Rand, the commander of AFGSC, participated in a B-2 training flight. This sortie provided him a new perspective on the unique capabilities of our platform. It also allowed him to see firsthand the high-level of skill our maintenance and operations teammates are known for across the command!

In addition to Gen. Rand's local training flight, our team executed a mix of initial qualification and currency training missions. These flights included sorties that allowed our aircrews to hone their global strike techniques and procedures. We also flew missions designed to strengthen our low-observable strike capabilities by integrating with F-35 and F-22 fighters ... what an exciting week!

This afternoon I hope to see many of you at Mission's End beginning at 4 p.m. for my promotion party celebration. At the senior leader level, promotions only occur if you are surrounded by a stellar team who work together well and care for one another ... and that is exactly what we have here at Whiteman. To be frank, this celebration is about you and your excellent work more than anything else, so please stop by if you are free!

Finally, if you are looking for something to do this weekend, our Force Support team, in partnership with the University of Central Missouri, is hosting StealthCon 2017 at UCM's Student Union. This year's special celebrity guests include Phil LaMarr, Mindy Sterling, Alexis Cruz, Erick Avari and many more! For more information regarding times, vendors, cosplay guests, and artists, please visit the event's website, which is www.thestealthcon.com.

Watch out for one another this weekend ... and if you see something unsafe, say something!

Defend ... Avenge!

Thank you for executing the mission

By 13th Bomb Squadron Commander

On Jan. 18, 2017, Team Whiteman launched three B-2 bombers to strike targets in Libya, engaging in its first combat operations in six years. This mission, critical to our nation's fight against global terrorism, was a massive success and could not have been accomplished without the skill, diligence and professionalism of the 4,000 Airmen at Whiteman Air Force Base, Missouri. It was our Total Force maintainers, munitions experts and operations support squadron personnel who enabled the 13th Bomb Squadron (BS) to effectively carry out this mission. Thank you for your skill, dedication and service to our great nation.

In particular, the herculean efforts of our maintenance squadrons, which prepared five combat-ready aircraft on short notice, were nothing short of spectacular. The fact that the maintainers of the 131st and 509th Bomb Wings prepared these aircraft during a weekend hit by one of Missouri's worst ice storms in recent history, only adds to their already storied reputation.

Likewise, the stellar work of our munitions brethren in the days leading up to the mission goes unrivaled. The task of building hundreds of munitions is undoubtedly daunting, but Team Whiteman's ammo troops were able to build a total of 500 bombs. It is even more impressive given that our munitions troops built each of these weapons in roughly five minutes per bomb.

Finally, thank you to the operations group Airmen, and specifically to our mission planners. Your ability to develop successful plans in an uncertain and complex environment while under timed pressure is remarkable. You ensured the pilots were thoroughly prepared, the aircraft departed on time, remained properly fueled and ultimately struck our targets with devastating effects to the enemy. In fact, for one of the pilots chosen for the mission, this was his first sortie since graduating from the U.S. Air Force Weapons School. Talk about a highly trained pilot who was able to apply his recent lessons learned to a combat mission!

In the end, over 4,000 Airmen helped the 13th BS fly more than 12,000 miles for a duration of 33 hours, use 786,000 pounds of fuel, drop over 80 weapons and eliminate 78 ISIS extremists. Please know your efforts have not gone unnoticed, and your professionalism, commitment and hard work underpins the nation's trust in our armed forces. This was a huge win for our Total Force Team, Air Mobility Command, 8th Air Force and Air Force Global Strike Command ... Thanks to you.

Great futures start here: Exceptional Whiteman AFB teen wins Youth of the Year honor

By Kimberly O'Brien

Whiteman AFB Teen Programs

William Turner will compete at Jefferson City in April for Missouri Military Youth of the Year 2017. Youth of the Year is a scholarship competition through Boys & Girls Clubs of America (BGCA). William is the local winner from Whiteman Air Force Base (AFB), and will receive a $300 college scholarship from Whiteman AFB Youth Programs.

"This 15-year-old is a true example of an extraordinary young man, recognized by Whiteman Youth Programs and BGCA, for his sound character, leadership skills and willingness to give back to the community," said Kimberly O'Brien, the Whiteman AFB Youth Program teen coordinator.

Being named Youth of the Year is the highest honor a Whiteman AFB Teen Programs member can receive. As BGCA's premier youth recognition program, Youth of the Year recognizes outstanding contributions to a member's family, school, community and teen center, as well as success overcoming personal challenges and obstacles. Youth of the Year encourages teens to reach their full potential by achieving academic success, leading healthy lifestyles and contributing to their communities.

"Youth of the Year honorees are shining examples and living proof that great futures start at Whiteman AFB Youth Programs," said O'Brien. "We are very proud of William. He is dedicated to Keystone Club, education for all youth, and helping others."

William is active at Knob Noster High School in competitive robotics club, the agriculture club, and maintains excellent grades. William aspires to attend the University of Missouri to become a publishing editor.

"This experience has been a challenge, but well worth the benefit of receiving scholarship money at the local level and hopefully state, regional, and national level," said William.

If William wins the state title, he will then compete for the title of Midwest Region Military Youth of the Year and an additional $10,000 scholarship from Disney, Toyota, and other sponsors. Six regional winners will then advance to Washington, D.C., to compete for the title of BGCA's National Military Youth of the Year. The National Youth of the Year will receive an additional scholarship of up to $50,000 from The Rick and Susan Goings Foundation and will have the opportunity to meet with the President of the United States in the White House.

If you would like more information on Teen Programs, please call 660-687-5586.

Al Udeid 'Caddy land' flush with improvements, replacements

By Senior Airman Cynthia Innocenti
379th Air Expeditionary Wing

Airmen with the 379th Expeditionary Civil Engineer Squadron (ECES) play a major role in the upkeep of living and operating conditions at Al Udeid Air Base, Qatar. Since 2015, one initiative that has kept Airmen with the squadron working hard is the replacement of 50 old "caddilacs," outdoor restroom and shower facilities that span across the installation. U.S. Air Force Tech. Sgt. Dominique, the project manager with the 379th ECES water and fuels section, is currently the Airman heading the replacement plan.

Dominique, a reservist from Whiteman Air Force Base, Missouri, has been the lead for the "Caddy Land" project while deployed at Al Udeid. As a water and fuels technician, Dominique was tasked to manage the replacement portion of the 379th ECES cadillac trailer plan, one part of the continued improvement of facilities at Al Udeid.

U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Alan, a section chief with the 379th ECES water and fuels section, explained when Dominique arrived to Al Udeid, the 379th ECES was dealing with one of the largest quality of life upgrades in the U.S. Central Command area of responsibility, and they needed a sharp NCO to lead the charge.

30 caddies in 30 weeks, Dominique was told. "My priority is the replacement of old latrine caddies, and with the help of my right-hand man Alex, I have high hopes as to the progress we will make," said Dominique.

Dominique explained U.S. Air Force Staff Sgt. Alex, a water and fuels technician with the 379th ECES, helped him get his footing when he arrived here and has been a wealth of knowledge when it comes to the water and fuels field. Alex is just one of the many personnel Dominique coordinates with on a daily basis.

To replace a cadillac, a call is first made to the heating, ventilation and air conditioning shop to remove old air-conditioning units. Dominique then contacts the electrical shop to disconnect all electrical wires, and the water and fuels section to coordinate the disconnecting of water and waste lines. Service contractors on base are also informed to fill water tanks, empty sewage tanks and replace cleaning supplies. The shop with the biggest part in the replacement process are the "Dirt Boyz," construction Airmen with the 379th ECES. The Dirt Boyz transport the old and new cadillac latrines, perform ground preparation, place the new caddies and demolish the old ones.

"Some of these projects are simple, while some require a lot of coordination," said Dominique. "One of the toughest jobs so far was the caddy we replaced at the passenger terminal, because of all the foot traffic and clearances that had to be obtained from airfield management."

Since November 2015, Airmen with the 379th ECES have replaced 33 caddilacs of the 50 originally selected to be replaced; eight of those were accomplished by Dominique in his first two months.

"The disconnect, demo, replacement and reconnection of a caddy takes approximately a week, and with the few months I have remaining, I plan on finishing what I started during my stay at Al Udeid," said Dominique.

"There are so many facets to the 379th ECES that one person cannot manage everything, which is why Airmen like Dominique are assigned as lead coordinators for large projects," explained U.S. Air Force Tech. Sgt. Ryan, a day shift NCO in charge with the 379th ECES water and fuels section.

"With Dominique at the helm of this project, I have complete confidence the mission will be executed successfully, enabling the shop to execute their other duties and ultimately ensuring we continue to keep water flowing, sewage draining and caddies functioning 24/7, 365 days a year," said Ryan.

Allen added that Dominique was hand-selected for this duty and has worked tirelessly from the start.

"Tech. Sgt. Dominique was a blessing in disguise when he arrived here in January," said Allen. "He has worked relentlessly to plan, coordinate and execute caddy installs with a high level of quality and efficiency that is second to none. He is without a doubt, one of the most talented NCOs I have had the pleasure of working with."

AFGSC's Year of the Family:

Brothers in arms

509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

For many American families, children turn 18, head to college, move away and may only see their families once a year, if that. For those in the military or with a sibling in the military, it may be even less than that.

Unlike these families, the Moensters had the opportunity to be in the same place at the same time, and they took it.

U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Todd “Eddie” Moenster, the 509th Bomb Wing chief of command post, and U.S. Army Lt. Col. Christopher “Herman” Moenster, the 1st Battalion 135th Aviation Regiment commander, decided to take a route in their careers bringing them even closer, not just as brothers, but as brothers in arms.

Christopher desired challenge and adventure for his future, wanting to be a part of something greater than himself. He didn’t know for certain what this was going to be until a visit to the local university gave him an opportunity he couldn’t resist.

Two years later, in 1994, Christopher commissioned into the U.S. Army through an accelerated ROTC program at Wentworth Military Academy in Lexington, Missouri.

For Todd, the decision was simple. The Moensters have a long heritage of service in their family. Many of their relatives served in the Army, Navy and Air Force during the Civil War, World War I, World War II, the Vietnam War and during peacetime. Their ancestors led from the front, serving as artillerymen, B-17 Flying Fortress pilots, and boatswain. Because of those before him, he had been interested in a military career since childhood.

“For me, the military traditions of my family inspired me to serve,” said Todd. “Hearing their stories while growing up made quite an impact on my motivation to join. My brother deciding to serve in the Army furthered my interest in a military career.”

An airshow at Scott Air Force Base (AFB), Illinois, solidified

his dreams of becoming a pilot, making the Air Force his top choice.

“From that point forward, I constantly researched airplanes and the Air Force,” said Todd. “This led me to a familiarity with the U.S. Air Force Academy, and I determined that was the best route for me to reach my goals and start my service to this country.”

On June 2, 1999, Todd transitioned from cadet to a commissioned officer in the U.S. Air Force with some assistance from his brother.

“My proudest moment was when I administered the oath of office to my brother and helped my parents pin on his bars as a newly-minted second lieutenant when he graduated from U.S. Air Force Academy,” said Christopher.

Since that day the brothers have shared experiences beyond those of the average siblings.

“I would say that it has strengthened the way we relate to each other,” said Christopher. “The shared experiences we have of losing friends, deploying, and personal sacrifice is a bond that has made us closer.”

Despite being from different branches of the military, they share the common bond of being brothers in arms, giving them two forms of brotherhood throughout their careers.

“I think the military has strengthened an already strong relationship,” said Todd. “Already brothers by blood, we also enjoy sharing in the brotherhood of arms.”

This is especially true for the two when it comes to flying. After flying the B-1, Todd snagged a slot as a B-2 Spirit pilot, landing him at Whiteman AFB, Missouri, with his brother who was assigned to Whiteman also, as a part of the 1-135th.

“We are still able to share a common love of flight,” said Todd.

While both brothers fill leadership positions, they are pilots by trade. The Moensters have not only gotten the opportunity to tour each others’ facilities, but they have gotten to see their brother’s true passions firsthand.

Last year, Christopher flew Todd on a flight in a UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter.

“That was a real highlight for me to be able to fly my brother while on a training mission,” said Christopher.

Thanks to their joint service, they always have each other to deal with military-specific challenges that arise in their careers.

“We discuss issues of leadership, career progression, schools we need to go to, future assignments and even confide in each other when things aren’t going well,” said Christopher. “It is good for me to know I can consult with someone who has no agenda other than to help me. I am there to do the same thing for Todd.”

Christopher says in addition to overseeing the beginning of his brother’s career, and standing by his side during, he may get to be the presiding official at his retirement as well.

Until then, the brothers in arms are sure to make time to just be brothers, too.

Lilly Ledbetter

Equal Pay Activist
is this week's honoree.

In 1979, as the only woman working on the factory floor at Goodyear tire, Ledbetter faced sexual harassment daily. In 1998, she received an anonymous note informing her that she was paid significantly less than men doing the same job. Ledbetter filed a sex discrimination case against her longtime employer. The case, Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., was tried and found in Ledbetter's favor, but Goodyear appealed and her win was reversed. In 2007 the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 against Ledbetter, arguing that she would have had to file her complaint within 180 days after receiving her first discriminatory paycheck. In August 2008 she spoke about pay equity at the Democratic National Convention. On Jan. 29, 2009, former President Barack Obama signed the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act into law. The new law loosens the time restrictions on filing discrimination cases, allowing the 180-day clock to reset every time an individual experiences an act of discrimination.
