509TH SFS TEAMS BATTLE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

FSS Needs YOU!

By Lt. Col. Eugenia Edwards
509th Force Support Squadron commander

but with your help, energy, and excitement on Feb. 20, we are confident that we will once again earn the title of Best Food Service Program in the Air Force!

Your food service team here on Whiteman Air Force Base, Missouri, is engaged in a fierce competition, and you can help us bring home the trophy!

Whiteman AFB has been selected as a finalist for the Air Force John L. Hennessy Trophy, and a team will be on base Feb. 18-22 for our on-site evaluation. This is a prestigious award, not just for the food service program, but for the entire installation.

The evaluators will be judging total base support as one of the major graded areas for the trophy, so everyone plays a role to ensure Team Whiteman comes out victorious.

Whether you are Active Duty, Missouri Air National Guard, Reserve, or Civilian, all base personnel are invited to the Total Force Rally at Mission's End, Tuesday, Feb. 20, at 8 a.m. This event will kick off the official evaluation, and will make a lasting impact on the evaluators that Whiteman has the motivation, support, pride, and professionalism to be worthy of recognition.

It's not all work on your part! Base personnel are also invited to our Food Expo on Feb. 21, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. There will be 17 vendors at the Ozark Inn Dining Facility offering FREE, generous samples of new food items.

Whiteman has not taken home the Hennessy Trophy since 2013,

Base Community Council strengthens Whiteman

By Airman 1st Class Taylor Phifer
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

The Base Community Council at Whiteman Air Force Base, Missouri, is an organization where base and community leaders partner together to build strong working relationships and mutual support.

"BCC works in sync with Whiteman's leadership to support the mission by engaging with the communities that surround the base," said Karl Kramer, the BCC president. "The support we give to the base helps improve the quality of life for Team Whiteman and ultimately improves the execution of the mission."

Whiteman's BCC is comprised of 18 different communities surrounding the installation, each of which is partnered with a different squadron at Whiteman. Together, they participate in different community or unit events throughout the year.

"The community engagement is great in this program," said Kramer. "Communities offer the Airmen and families opportunities to enjoy different events they hold, and the community members also are able to engage in several events on base."

Every month, Whiteman hosts a luncheon featuring a different community and their corresponding squadron. Each luncheon also features a guest speaker, usually a military or civilian leader, to further inform communities about the mission at Whiteman.

In addition to supporting monthly luncheons, the BCC also organizes programs to help welcome and support Airmen.

"The BCC provided me a chance to go home during the holidays," said U.S. Air Force Airman 1st Class Riley Fulton, a medical logistics technician assigned to the 509th Medical Group. "The opportunity meant a lot to me. I got to spend time with my family and show my love and appreciation for them while being home. I will cherish the experience forever."

The programs the BCC provides Whiteman are designed to benefit Airmen, increasing productivity on the base.

"Our efforts support Airmen with activities on and off base, which allows them to separate physically and mentally from their day-to-day work," said Kramer. "Programs like Adopt an Airman and Airmen Home for the Holidays offer great experiences and support the care and wellbeing of Airmen, allowing them to come back to work recharged and ready to accomplish Whiteman's mission."

For many years, this program has served Team Whiteman positively by actively engaging Airmen and families with the surrounding communities and allowing the community members a chance to understand Whiteman's mission of strategic deterrence, global strike and combat support ... anytime, anywhere.

Air Force outlines future of bomber force

By Secretary of the Air Force Public Affairs

The Air Force outlined plans for its bomber fleet in its Fiscal Year 2019 President's Budget Request Feb. 12, 2018.

In line with the service's bomber vector, the budget request detailed the Air Force plan to update the B-52 Stratofortress fleet and continue modifications to the B-1 Lancer and B-2 Spirit fleets while continuing to acquire B-21 Raiders.

"As part of our decisions presented in the FY19 President's Budget, the Air Force will update the B-52 bomber fleet and fund development of replacement engines," said Secretary of the Air Force Heather A. Wilson. "We will also continue necessary B-1 and B-2 modifications to keep them relevant until the B-21s come on line."

Once sufficient B-21 aircraft are operational, the B-1s and B-2s will be incrementally retired. Delivery and retirement timelines are dependent on the B-21 production and delivery schedules.

"If the force structure we have proposed is supported by the Congress, bases that have bombers now will have bombers in the future," Wilson said. "They will be B-52s and B-21s."

The B-21, which the Air Force plans to start fielding in the mid-2020s, will eventually become the backbone of the U.S. strategic bomber fleet and serve as a visible, flexible deterrent to adversaries and assure U.S. partners and allies.

"Modernizing and recapitalizing our bomber force is absolutely central to the recently released National Defense Strategy and the Nuclear Posture Review," said Chief of Staff of the Air Force Gen. David L. Goldfein. "Our bomber force allows the commander in chief to hold targets at risk anywhere on the globe with unparalleled range and our most diverse payloads."

The decision to maintain the B-52 is based on numerous factors including maintenance and sustainment metrics, such as aircraft availability, mission capability, supply, maintenance hours per flying hour and total cost perspectives.

"With an adequate sustainment and modernization focus, including new engines, the B-52 has a projected service life through 2050, remaining a key part of the bomber enterprise well into the future," said Gen. Robin Rand, Air Force Global Strike Command commander.

The Air Force's bombers are an integral component of the nation's strategic deterrence and global strike capabilities. The nation requires that the bomber force remain a potent and decisive asset throughout the spectrum of conflict in the modern battlespace.

"At the end of Desert Storm in 1991 we had 290 total bombers," said Rand. "Today that force has dropped to 157 bombers at five bomb wings and 15 total force bomb squadrons. That's a 46 percent decrease in our bomber force while we have conducted continuous combat operations such as Allied Force, Enduring Freedom, Iraqi Freedom, Odyssey Dawn, Inherent Resolve and Freedom's Sentinel, in addition to continuous bomber rotations in the (U.S. Central Command) and (U.S. Pacific Command) areas of responsibility."
